THREE WOMEN IN MINISTRY

Paris, June 4. M. Leon Blum has completed his Cabinet, which is drawn entirely from the Socialist and Radical Socialist Parties. The main posts are as follows:

Premier, M. Leon Blum
Foreign Minister, M. Yves Delbos
Finance Minister, M. Vincent

Duriol
War Minister, M. Edouard Daladier
Minister of Interior, M. Sallier.

There will also be three Ministers without portfolio, M. Paul Benoist, Paul Faure and Camille Chautemps.

The Ministry includes three women Under-Secretaries—Madame Curie, for Scientific Research; Madame Suzanne Lucor, the so-called Socialist Saint, for Child Welfare; and Madame Brunschwig, the Suffragette leader, for State Orphans and War Widows.

The Ministry of Colonies has been retained, M. Moutet having been appointed thereto.

Many people will be ignorant of the constitution of the new Cabinet, owing to the decision of the Paris Press Syndicate not to publish newspapers, owing to difficulties of distribution on account of the strike.—Reuter.

CONVICT-KILLER ACQUITTED

LOEB'S FEARFUL CRIME RECALLED

Joliet, June 4. A jury to-day acquitted the convict, James Day, charged with murdering Richard Loeb, a fellow-prisoner in the Joliet Penitentiary, on January 30.

Day admitted to having slashed at Loeb with a razor. He said Loeb had made immoral suggestions to him.

Loeb, with another youth named Leopold, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Bobby Franks, a twelve-year-old boy, some years ago. Leopold and Loeb were the sons of wealthy parents and the "thrill murder" shocked the whole of the United States. Bobby Franks was tortured to death.

Loeb is still serving sentence.—Reuter.

Apprentice Plan Not Acceptable

LABOUR INDICATES OPPOSITION

London, June 4. The Amalgamated Engineering Union, at its annual conference, is discussing the Government's re-armament policy, and is determinedly opposed to the dilution of labour by the introduction of trainees.

The Conference has adopted a motion affirming that there is no shortage of skilled labour, if the available supply is efficiently handled.

Moreover, the Conference is instructing the Executive to use the whole resources of the Union definitely to oppose dilution from whatever angle, either Government or employers. Its introduction is sought.—Reuter Special.

PUBLIC WILL SEE REVUE

FREE ADMISSION ON KING'S BIRTHDAY

With regard to the revue and drama past programme marking His Majesty's birthday on June 23, it is announced by the authorities that the public will be admitted freely to Happy Valley to witness the revue and tickets will not be necessary to gain entrance.

Formerly it was stated that application must be made for tickets to the Garrison Adjutant, and this order is now cancelled.

WARLIKE MOVES IN ITALY

LEAGUE PUZZLED AT SUDDEN ACTIVITY

MAY PREFACE HAPSBURG RESTORATION

Geneva, June 4. League of Nations circles are puzzled to know the meaning of warlike reports from Italy.

In the first place, schools in Northern Italy are being closed a month before the date of the normal holidays, to enable the buildings to be made available for military purposes.

Secondly, certain naval reserves have been called up.

Thirdly, two more classes of reservists have been ordered to remain in readiness.

Fourthly, Italians at Geneva have been warned to be in readiness to join up.

Fifthly, there is much military activity on both the French and Yugo-Slavian frontiers.

The reports, coupled with the return of Marshal Badoglio, may be intended as a warning to the Powers if sanctions are maintained or intensified, or they may be connected with the restoration of the Hapsburgs.

The fact that Dr. Schuschnigg, Austrian Chancellor, is at present visiting Vareggio, where he will possibly see Signor Mussolini, seems to support the latter hypothesis, and it is reported that an agreement regarding the return of the Hapsburgs has been reached between Italy and Germany.—Reuter.

Assembly Convoked

Geneva, June 4. In spite of the outspoken opposition of Italy, Dr. Edouard Benes, the President, has convoked a session of the League of Nations Assembly for a date to be announced later. The Assembly will meet some time in June.

The purpose of the meeting is to consider the situation arising out of Italy's annexation of Ethiopia, and the problem of sanctions, and is called on the initiative of the Argentine Government, supported by the Latin-American states.—United Press.

League Assembly

London, June 4. A Geneva press message received in London this evening states that following the demand of the Argentine Republic, and in conformity with the decision taken by the League Assembly on October 11 last not to close its 16th session, the President of the Assembly, M. Benes, after consulting the President of Council, Mr. Anthony Eden, and the Secretary General, in accordance with recognised procedure, has decided to summon a meeting of the Assembly. The date will be fixed very shortly.

It is generally expected that the Assembly will be called for June 29 and that the Council meeting fixed for the 16th will accordingly be postponed till the 20th.—British Wireless.

MR. LANSBURY RETURNS

London, June 4. Mr. George Lansbury reached Southampton to-day on his return from the United States, where he has been on a speaking tour in connection with a peace campaign.—British Wireless.

MEMORIAL FUND PLAN WIDELY PRAISED

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

London, June 4. The King George Memorial Fund has received widespread prominence in the Press, which extols the dual nature of the memorial, especially the proposal for the provision of playing-fields throughout the country, and strongly commends the appeals to the public.

The Times comments that from the first it was felt that the memorial should take two forms—a visible monument of proper dignity and beauty, and a philanthropic scheme to benefit the whole country.

The Morning Post says: "We are certain that the response will be generally cordially received, and the playing-fields will have a beneficent purpose which must appeal strongly to the whole nation.—Reuter Special."

LABOUR FEELS ITS POWER

Paris, June 4. The bread supply of Paris was threatened to-lay when flour mill workers decided to join the strike, despite the assurance of Communist leaders, who are behind the labour tie-up, that the general food supply would not be interrupted.

The truck drivers' strike has made difficult the delivery of vegetables, meat, fish and other food supplies.

The gas workers in the western suburbs are out and the supply tanks are dropping hourly.

Group after group of workers, fired with the new sense of power in the hands of the Leftists, have struck. They feel it is necessary to impress the incoming Government with the necessity of granting the demands of the workers. They want, they say, a new deal in wages and working hours, and collective bargaining powers.

The strike has spread to the Lille district coal mines.

NEGOTIATIONS FAIL

Following the breakdown of the Ministry of Labour's settlement negotiations, the metallurgical employees issued a statement, saying the strike has created an unprecedented situation of a revolutionary character and was a "flagrant violation of the rights of property."

Meanwhile, the President of France, M. Lebrun, has called upon M. Leon Blum, the Leftist leader, to form a Cabinet. M. Blum has promised to present his Cabinet list to-day.

The Chamber of Deputies has elected M. Edouard Herriot President and the Leftist strength was demonstrated by the vote. M. Herriot was given 378 and M. Xavier Vallat, the Rightist candidate, 150.

The Sarrat Cabinet immediately resigned.—United Press.

SARRAUT SEES BLUM

Paris, June 4. M. Albert Sarrat, accompanied by his Cabinet, has waited upon M. Lebrun, the President, and the Government's resignation has been accepted.

In accordance with custom, M. Sarrat consulted the presidents of the Senate and Chamber and then saw M. Leon Blum, who will present his Cabinet to the President to-night.—Reuter.

GOLD TRAIN

Paris, June 4. The American banks here to-day chartered a special gold train to Cherbourg to save a day's interest by catching the S. S. Aquitania which carried 43 cases of gold to the United States, valued at 160,000,000 francs.—United Press.

Paris, June 4. The Bank of France shows a loss of 437,000,000 francs in gold for the week ended May 29, and gold cover has thus declined from 62.37 to 61.01 per cent.—Reuter.

London, June 4. Gold currencies were again freely on offer in the Foreign Exchange Market to-day.

FLYING ADVENTURERS SURRENDER MAILED

London, June 4. Manila philatelists will be very disappointed to hear that the mail which they despatched on the Commonwealth of the Philippines monoplane destined for Madrid, is proceeding to its destination by the prosaic medium of the P. and O. liner Chitral.

The mail was consigned to the machine flown by Arnulf and Calvo, the Filipino fliers who are still in Hongkong waiting to take their next hop towards Spain. When the monoplane arrived last week, the Rowton Post Office was telephoned and informed that there were two bags of mail waiting to be dealt with. The Post Office immediately sent a van up and collected the mail. One bag was for delivery in Hongkong, the other was loose and intended to Madrid but changed to Hongkong.

JANET JAY
plans a Wedding
Reception

Here Comes

The BRIDE

TODAY'S Diary is in honour of future homemakers. I expect there are many mothers up and down the country who are planning their daughters' White-weddings.

Don't you agree that the prettiest and most enjoyable weddings are often the simplest? A cheery meal, a speech or two, finishing up with a party after the happy pair have left for the honeymoon, is a delightful celebration.

problem of what food and refreshments to offer will probably take first place when you come to work out the plans. If the bride has fixed her wedding for noon or earlier, one of the jolliest celebrations is an all-down lunch for the family and friends, the bride, of course, in the place of honour in the centre of the table ready to be cut at the end of the meal.

At an afternoon wedding a reception with light refreshments usually follows, and I think that most mothers will find this the easiest way of entertaining.

It is surprising how elastic even a small house becomes on these occasions if you go about things in the right way: I saw one good notion at a friend's wedding the other week.

The presents were displayed in an upstairs room which had been cleared for the occasion, and I noticed that the bride's mother took two or three people to see them at a time, all of which gave a good deal of contention. Some of the larger furniture taken out of the lounge will leave room for people to walk about and for the bride and groom to greet their guests. I would keep the dining-room purely for refreshments.

The dining table can be set into the window bay or against the wall to be used for serving tea and coffee, while sandwiches and rolls with plates of plates are put ready on small tables ranged round the walls.

Cutting the Cake

The bride cake, of course, is meant to be admired as well as eaten, so you might put it on a table in the lounge. One wedge ready cut and the place marked with a ribbon makes things easier for the bride.

If you decide on a sit-down lunch or tea, there will be table decorations to be thought of. To my mind nothing better to look on varies of spring and summer flowers. Pale pink roses or carnations, for example, look beautiful mixed with a few sprigs of delphinium or lupins.

Cakes, too, are obtainable with tinted icing instead of white. There is a lovely creamy off-white tone shell pink, and the palest almond green for folk who are not superstitious,

I fell for a pink cake, with pink, blue and silver for the table decorations. Guests will appreciate the compliment of a flower posy at each woman's place, and a buttonhole for the men.

Bride and bridegroom, of course, sit together at the head of the table the bride at her

bride's mother sits at his right, with the bridegroom's father next to her. To the left of the bride comes her own father and next to him her mother-in-law.

"I Propose a Toast"

There is no special precedence for the remainder of the guests, but it is a good plan to arrange beforehand where they shall sit, and put a small place card at each cover.

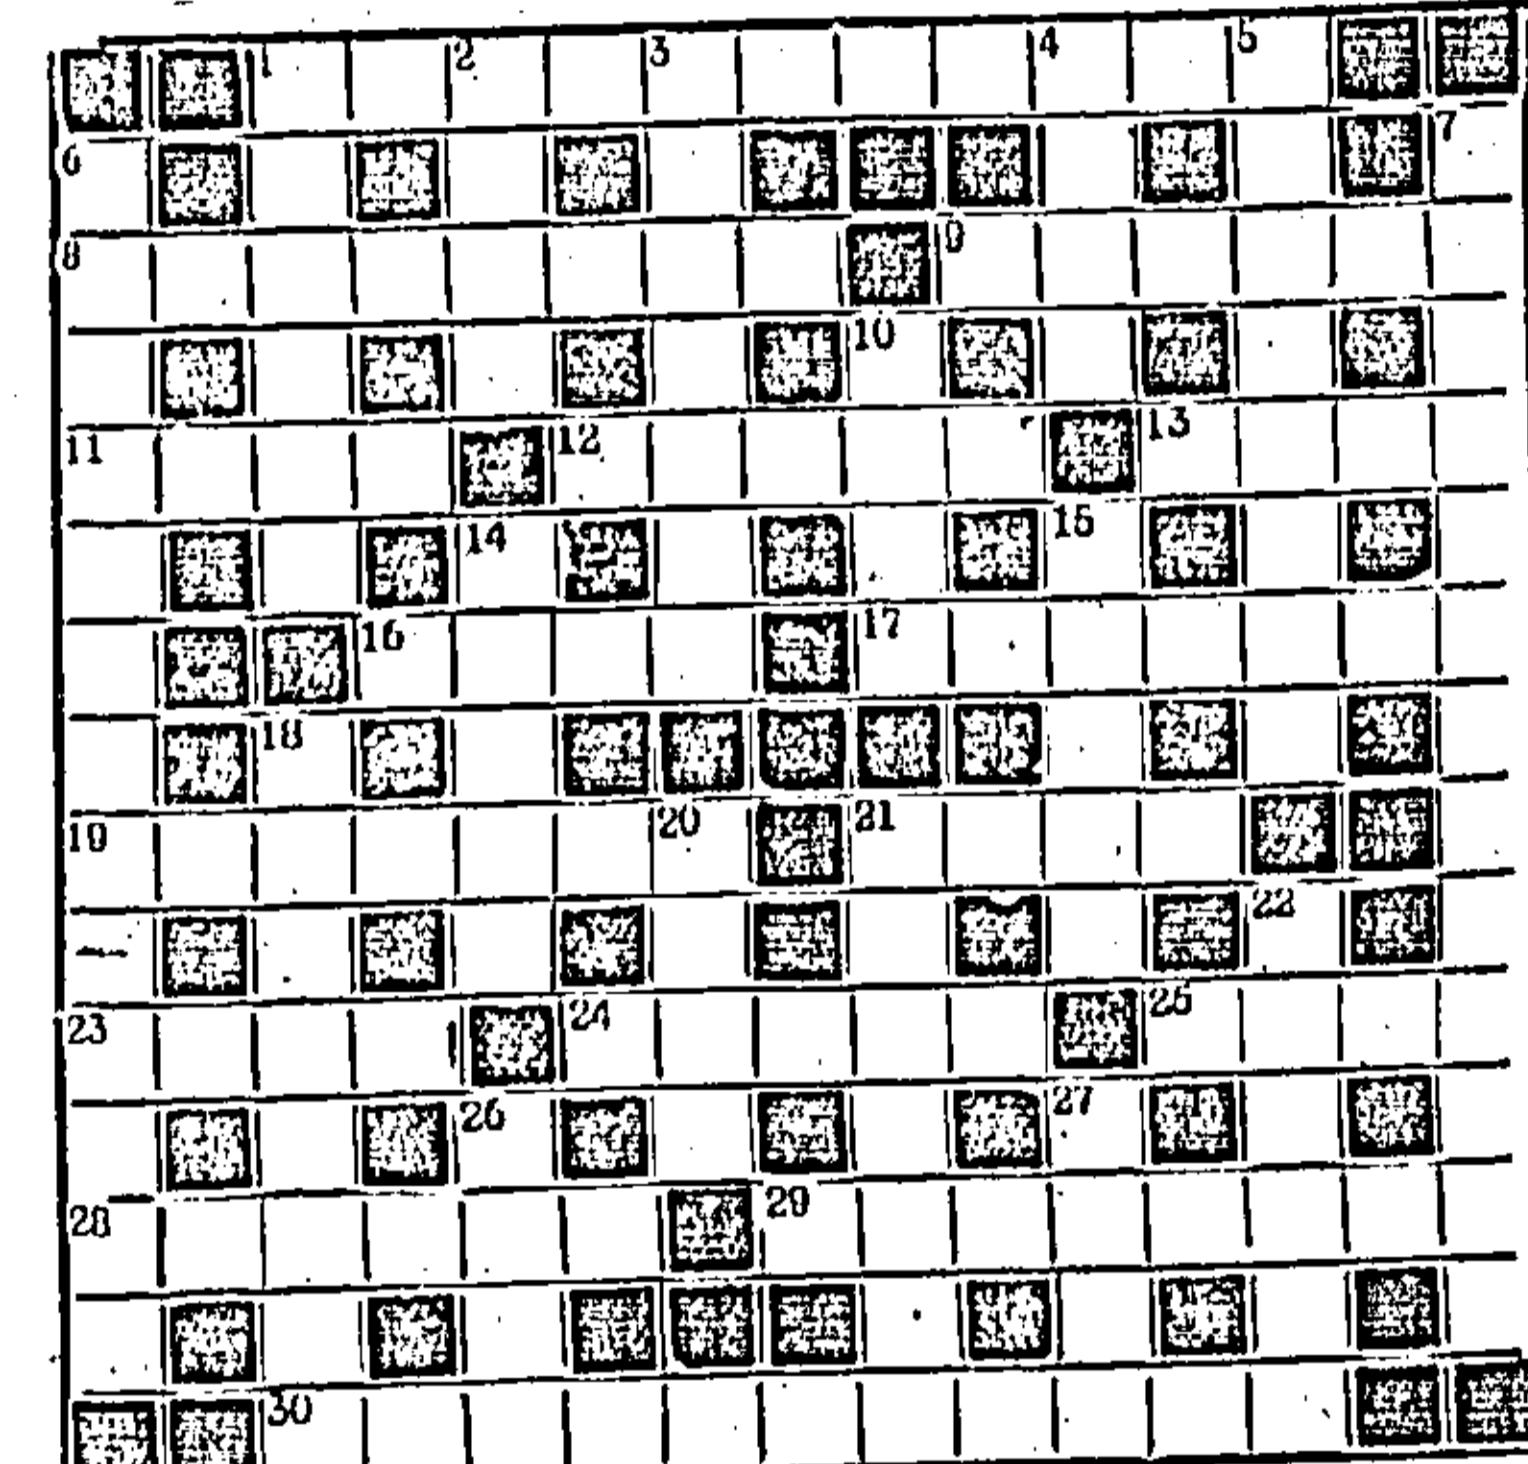

Then the speeches. If you are having a reception, these will come about half-way through; if a sit-down lunch or tea, towards the end of the meal. The first toast is naturally the health of the bride and bridegroom, proposed by the bride's father. The bridegroom replies to this.

The bridesmaids' health is then proposed by some old friend or relative of the family, and the best man replies for them. After these main speeches one or two old friends will probably like to add their congratulations.

At some weddings the bridesmaids and best man go off to a party of their own, but the wedding reception often expands into a party for everyone.

This should not mean much extra work for the bride's mother. Supper can be provided from the food left over from the reception with some extra sandwiches, and you can arrange dancing and games for the younger set in the lounge.

Do not egg-and-bread crush the veal cutlets, but cook them simply in plain butter, and remember, above all, that meat is like the dog, the woman and the walnut-tree—"the harder they beat the better they be!" So beat each cutlet until it is at least half as thick as it originally was. Have ready some tomato sauce and when the cutlets are done, keep them hot while you mix with the sauce the juices which have escaped from the meat into the frying-pan. ## Mystery Murder of "Girl in Pyjamas" No Nearer Solution

Hope of Solving Puzzle Practically Abandoned in Australia—Intensive Hunt Carried On for Eighteen Months in Many Parts

All hope has been abandoned in Australia of discovering the identity of the "Pyjama Girl" or who murdered her. Her body, clad in yellow Chinese silk pyjamas, battered, burned and charred, was found in a culvert under a road near the border town of Albury, in September, 1934.

Since that time an intensive hunt has been going on to discover her identity, spreading far overseas, but without success.

Scotland Yard was asked to help, the police in Paris, Berlin, New York and all the large cities in the world were asked to help, but the question, "Who is she?" remained unanswered.

Paris did come along with the identification that she was an Australian girl who had married a Czechoslovakian, but this was found to be incorrect.

The case is remarkable from a statistical point of view. Ten thousand pounds were spent in trying to unravel the mystery; detectives travelled thousands of miles, checking up clues; 30,000 people were interviewed in the matter; more than 100,000 letters were received by the police on the subject, some of them as far away as Norway; 200 girls and young women, posted as missing, were discovered; a large number of missing wives found; some happy and some unhappy, while thousands of circulars and photographs were printed and circulated.

PECULIAR EARS

The girl had peculiarly-shaped ears and these formed the main feature in some of the photographs as "close-ups." Experts examined the girl's mouth and expressed the opinion that dental work that had been performed on the teeth had been done by an English dentist.

One detective has done nothing since the discovery of the body, seventeen months ago, but attend to the case, while 1,000 people have viewed the body in the hope of being able to identify it.

One police theory was that the girl had only recently arrived in Australia by ship, that she had had a love affair with a man on the voyage and that her lover had taken her by motor car far into the country, murdered her and left the country. Ship's officers and pursuers were provided with photographs, but still no clue was provided.

The girl's body still lies in a bath of formalin in the Sydney University Medical School. Occasionally the room is opened to admit someone who might be able to identify the girl.

SECOND OF DEATH JURY DIES

New York, June 1.
PHILIP HOCKENBURY, one of the jurors who in February of last year found Bruno Richard Hauptmann guilty of murdering the Lindbergh baby, was killed today.

His body was found on a railway track near Highbridge Station, New Jersey.

He had been repairing a train signal and was apparently struck by a passing train.

Hockenbury is the second Hauptmann juror to die. The other, Liscum Case, collapsed with a heart attack last February.

$2,680 STAMPS STOLEN ON TRAIN JOURNEY

PROPERTY OF ARISTOCRATIC ENGLISH FAMILY

Vienna, June 1.

Vienna police announced today that a member of "an aristocratic English family" has been robbed of a stamp collection worth £2,680 on a train journey between Vienna and Paris.

Mr. Patrick Woods, a British subject, who is secretary to the owner of the collection, told the police that a young woman, understood to be an actress, exchanged the box containing the stamp collection for a similar box which was empty.

The woman left the train at Basle. The theft appears to have been carefully planned, for the false box was similar to the stolen one in every detail.—Exchange.

Youthful Film Star Receives Allowance From Canada

FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW, SAID TO EARN $1,500 A WEEK BY ACTING, DRAWS MONEY AS SON OF DISABLED WAR VETERAN

Freddie Bartholomew, twelve-year-old British film star who won overnight fame as the orphan in the screen play based on Charles Dickens' David Copperfield, has received an annual allowance from the Canadian Government, it was learned to-day from a reliable source.

Cecil Llewellyn Bartholomew, the boy's father, it was learned, enlisted at Toronto in 1916 in the Royal Canadian Dragoons, went to England and was drafted to the 10th Battalion, C.E.F. He was wounded in one knee so severely that surgeons were forced to amputate his leg.

ENTITLED TO ALLOWANCE

As the son of a war veteran receiving a disability allowance, Freddie and his sisters, Eileen and Hilka, were entitled to allowances from the Canadian department of pensions. The scale of allowances is $180 for the first child, $320 for two children and $120 more for each additional child.

Freddie's pay is reputed to be $1,500 a week, but it could not be learned if he was likely to lose his allowances due to his large earnings. Ordinarily he would be entitled to it until he is sixteen.

The second set of figures shows an increase of $23 million in deposits in Australian savings banks to $21,985,000, or between $31 and $32 per head of the total population.

DEPRESSION GOING

AUSTRALIA BUYS, SELLS AND SAVES MORE

Two sets of figures, just issued in Canberra, reflect the continued recovery of Australia in particular and the Empire in general, from depression.

They show that for the first eight months of the current financial year, Australia had a favourable trade balance of $20 million sterling. Imports, compared with the previous corresponding eight months, were up $3 million, or 15.6 per cent.

They have been increased by the purchase of more motor cars, petrol, tobacco, machinery and arms and ammunition largely from Britain. Larger sales of wool, wheat, wine, skins and frozen lamb helped exports to be increased by £14 million, according to Austral News.

The second set of figures shows an increase of $23 million in deposits in Australian savings banks to $21,985,000, or between $31 and $32 per head of the total population.

Stocks &amp; New York office cables:

Stocks: Securities were in moderate supply as traders worried over the French situation and the prospect of a delayed adjournment of Congress. Pittsburgh steel scrap prices have been reduced by 25 cents per ton. The Electric Power &amp; Light Corporation earned 17 cents per common share for the quarter ended April 30th, against 77 cents per combined preferred share. The Packard Motor Company's deliveries during May totalled 7,200 units, which constitutes a record, the previous peak being 7,100 units in August, 1929. Stocks to the value of $40,000,000,000 were listed on the board of the Stock Exchange on June 1st.

Cotton: Scattered rains in the East were insufficient. The Trade was buying, but offerings were light for forward months. Demand for New York "spots" is improving. The market met with good support on today's reaction.

What: There is no relief in the North-West or in Canada and some foreign buying was in evidence. The Times reports a carry-over of 862,000,000 bushels, indicating an exportable surplus of 87,000,000 bushels. A sharp decline is probable on material rains in the Spring Belt.

Rubber: Automobile production in the United States and Canada last week amounted to 98,800 units. Malayan exports in May totalled 45,647 tons. Buying has subsided owing to the French financial crisis and on further talk of devaluation. Caution is advisable.

Strike Me Pink

The Cyclone Racer, the giant roller coaster at Long Beach, California, was hired by Samuel Goldwyn for the comedy chase scenes in "Strike Me Pink," Eddie Cantor's sixth annual Goldwyn musical extravaganza which comes to the Oriental Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The musical, which features Ethel Merman, Sally Eilers, Parkyarkus and William Frawley, casts the popular comedian as a timid amusement park manager who takes a correspondence course in personal magnetism and runs afoul of a gang of skin-jacketed rascals in "Strike Me Pink," introduces a whole new crop of Goldwyn Girls, said to be the loveliest ever. The picture features a number of smart, novel dance ensembles staged by Robert Altom and photographed by Gregg Toland, and several tuneful new song hits written by Harold Arlen and Louis Brown. Included among the latter are "The Lady Dancer," "The Calabash Pipe," "First You Have Me High Then You Have Me Low" and "Shake It Off." Others prominent in the supporting cast are Helen Lowell, Gordon Jones, Brian Donlevy, Jack LaRue, Sunny O'Dea and Rita Rio.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The engagement is announced between Gwendoline Bentrice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Lakeman, B.B., King's Park Mansion, Kowloon, and Geoffrey Hope Brett of the local office of Thos. Cook and Son, Ltd.

Her crew had scarcely recovered from the rigours of that memorable twelve-hour encounter with the German fleet. The din of battle still rang in their ears.

The strain of high-pressure warfare showed in their eyes.

And here were Admiralty orders to stand by for "a mission" the nature of which none but the captain knew.

Officers and men alike were speculating on the next move of the Hampshire.

Was another engagement with the enemy imminent?

Or was there to be a new disposition of the naval forces that was to take the ship from her landlocked retreat in the Orkneys to some other stronghold?

Some whispered that the mission concerned the transportation of a high official on a secret and important voyage.

But that was rumour.

Shortly after four o'clock that afternoon the mystery was partially cleared up.

I saw a pinnace steaming across the Flow towards us. It was a pin-nace belonging to the Iron Duke, Sir John Jellicoe's flagship, which, with other ships of the Grand Fleet, was anchored in Scapa Flow.

Never came the pinnace, and in a few moments I was able to distinguish a number of khaki-clad figures in the boat.

And then, as she drew even closer, I suddenly recognised among them the figure of Lord Kitchener, the Secretary of State for War.

The vast import of the unexpected

Admiralty orders for the Hampshire to stand by for a "mission" flashed

She was to undertake a voyage with the great soldier aboard. I felt a thrill of pride at the signal honour conferred on the ship.

The pinnace was now alongside.

She rose and fell on the heavy swell that surged through Scapa Flow that day. A wild wind blew from the north-east and the water was turbulent.

Captain Herbert J. Savill, the captain of the Hampshire, stood at the top of the gangway to greet Lord

Kitchener as he came aboard followed by a considerable party.

There were his personal military secretary, Lieut.-Colonel O. A. FitzGerald, Mr. H. J. O'Brien, of the Foreign Office, Sir H. F. Donaldson and Mr. L. S. Robert son, of the Ministry of Munitions, Detective MacLaughlin, of Scotland

Yard, and several others.

The lights flickered out.

We made for the deck.

It took a long time to get there.

The only open hatchway was aft.

The messroom was forward. There was a lot of water in the corridors.

Gushing water.

There was a great deal of exci-tation at the companion ways.

I came up on to the half deck. They were saying that the

Hampshire had struck a mine. It had exploded on the port side of her foremost engine-room. A boiler had been burst.

By the head. Heeling a little to starboard too. Men were hurrying to their boat stations. Some were already there. The boats were filling. I was in charge of the Carley raft stations to starboard.

They were clinging to lifebelts and pieces of wreckage. There was the look of final despair on their upturned faces.

Orders Lost

In Gale

I hurried to my position. There were orders being shouted. They were mostly caught in the gale and lost.

There seemed to be difficulty in lowering some of the boats. Of course they were electrically controlled and the current had failed.

The wind howled. Immense banks of waves burst in shivering cascades over the decks.

Now they had managed to lower one of the boats. It had fifty men in it. It could not get away from the ship. Its ropes were cut.

A wave sucked it sharply to its crest.

Next minute it was swept against the Hampshire's side with terrific force.

Nothing but a tangled mass of bodies struggling for survival among a swirling flotsam.

And then Lord Kitchener came on deck.

He looked grave and calm.

I had a curious thought. It was as though he might not have appeared at that moment, not for self-preservation, but regreting the irreparable damage to a proud vessel.

But an officer shouted, "Make way for Lord Kitchener," and the men who stood around made a passage

among themselves.

HONGKONG BENEFITS BY DOMINION'S PURCHASES

IMPORTS GAINED 58 PER CENT
IN LAST TWELVE MONTHS

(By "Telegraph" Staff Representative)

There has been a movement afoot in Canada and the United States for many years, led by men of economic vision, the main aim of which is to encourage trade between Canada and the United States on one hand and China on the other.

Japan came into the picture, too, but not to the same extent as China; for it was felt that the potentialities of the Chinese market were vast enough to dwarf the commerce it might be possible to develop with Japan, highly industrialised and fairly self-contained in the matter of foodstuffs for some time to come, with Formosa, Korea and Manchukuo helping to supply the demand of Japanese consumers.

But China was different. There was a market there, providing the country had the purchasing power, which would make possible the multiplying of trans-Pacific commerce by thousands. The possibilities were incalculable.

Canada, although the business men of the country may have been slow to recognise it, needs just such a market as China in order to feed her infant industries. For a long time progress in trade between Canada and China has been slow, however, and money was hesitant when it was asked to enter a Far East enterprise. It was expensive; and there was risk.

But now Canada is taking the gamble; cautiously at first. But the business men are awakening to their opportunities, gradually.

They realise that in order to sell to China they have to buy from China, and last year—in 1935-36—they bought just 58 per cent more from Chinese farmers and manufacturers than in the year previous.

This is the official figure just issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and received in Hongkong yesterday.

Remarkable Increase

It was the most remarkable increase, this 58 per cent, jump, that Canada's trade has known in many years. The total of her imports from China was approximately $11,151,000 (Hongkong currency), compared to only $6,990,000 the year previous.

The month of March saw the most outstanding gain. China's exports to Canada during those 31 days moved upwards by 84 per cent, in comparison to the same month of the previous year.

Canada buys a great variety of goods from China, but more than half the total is peanuts and peanut oil. Other China exports include eggs, spice, animal bristles, carpets, tea, artificial silk, drugs and an immense variety of curios.

Other Side

The other side of the picture is not so remarkable; that is to say, when China's imports from Canada are considered, the gain is relatively trivial.

But China's imports will grow as the country's purchasing power increases, and when China needs to buy she will return the favours of a good customer. That is the Canadian business man's sound psychology.

Canada exported over $4,556,000 (Canadian currency) in raw and manufactured goods to the Chinese market in the last fiscal year. It was an increase of only two per cent. But then Canada already enjoys a small advantageous trade balance, and it would be a good thing to correct it.

Canada's chief items of export to China are paper, lumber, fish, wheat, flower, nickel and lead.

Hongkong's Share

Hongkong, as a great clearing house for Chinese goods, and much of China's imports, handles a large proportion of this freight between China and the British Dominion. The total of exports (Canadian imports) credited to Hongkong this year, although the country of origin was chiefly China, amounted to nearly $2,000,000 (Canadian currency) or one half the total.

This figure, too, showed a marked increase in 1935-36.

Canadian exports through Hongkong in the same period were $1,469,000 (Canadian currency) compared to $1,302,000. Thus there were encouraging gains in both fields.

ROYAL SCOT FINISHED UNTIL AFTER RECESS

Cannot Run To-Morrow Owing To Big Stake Winnings

CHIEF INTEREST IS IN LANTAO HANDICAP

COMPREHENSIVE REVIEW OF PROGRAMME

(By "Captain Foster")

It was indeed a great pity that the Stewards of the Hongkong Jockey Club had no other alternative but to postpone the second day of the Whit-sundate Meeting, owing to the sudden state of the track, for an hour. As a result, the weather cleared up. As a result, the Macao meeting, which was to be staged on Sunday, will be held week later. It may interest punters to know that very good entries have been received for this meet.

To-morrow the first saddle-bill will be rung at the usual time, 1.30 p.m., and the first race will be run at 2.00 p.m. We are now in the rainy season, but, if Mr. Clerk of the weather should favour us with glorious sunshine, punters may look forward to a repetition of last Saturday's exciting racing with a series of close finishes and several good dividends.

By virtue of winning over $2,500 in stake money since the beginning of the year, Royal Scot has been barred from the main event, the Whit-sundate Plate, and she will not be racing again until after the recess. Although the grey mare of the stable Harbrad has a bow to Soldier of Britain in the May Handicap run last Saturday, it was certainly no disgrace to her for she succumbed by the narrowest of margins. It is worth remembering that she was conceding 10 lbs. to the winner. Whether I was the medium which brought about a change in the saddle, I really do not know, but, Mr. Dietz rode a hard race on Royal Scot and it must be admitted that on level terms the combination will be hard to beat. The May Handicap was run in very fast time of 1.37 4/5, and Oak Bay was no match with the first three placed ponies.

SMALL FIELD OF GRIFFINS FOR THE OPENING EVENT

There will be a small field of this season's griffins running in the opening event, the Beaufort Handicap over a mile, and this event is one or less a consolation race to China Ponies; that have not won more than $2,000 since January 1. We should see a good contest between Amblerley, Booty Bay and Dawn Star; and all of them have been handicapped on their best form.

In the Sugar Leaf Handicap, Dawn Star carrying 155 lbs. beat Amblerley with 151 lbs. by a short head and the former is now set to concede five pounds. When Dawn Star turned the tables on Booty Bay in the Mount Davis Handicap, she had a pull of 11 lbs. and for a beating of a length, Booty Bay has the same weight (161 lbs.) to shoulder while Dawn Star has to tip the scale with 154 lbs.—a difference of seven pounds. I believe the adjustment is in favour of Dawn Star who will be piloted by Mr. Ip Kui-ying.

ZERO HAS VERY GOOD CHANCE OF BREAKING BAD SEQUENCE

Zero has run into a sequence of six unplaced outings but the brown mare was always running in the better divisions and she makes her first appearance to-morrow among the "D" class ponies in the Lantao Handicap over five furlongs. It will be recalled that she did a good gallop on Wednesday, May 27, covering six furlongs in 1.42 3/5 and this should bring her to the fore. Zero has been well looked after in the matter of pounds with 160 lbs. and her chief rival is Foxbridge but be careful with Daylight Eye on a soft going. Tyne is dangerous to upset the apple-cart.

BONDI HANDICAP

Lancashire Lad Looks Best

In the Bondi Handicap for "A" class Australian Ponies over a mile, I understand Mr. Proulx will take out Shooting Star instead of Boniface Star who was third in the Warwick Farm Handicap run last week, and the pony has a good chance if the going is not fast. As a matter of fact, I prefer Lancashire Lad, as this youngster has proved to be a mud-racer and he is not very high in the handicap. Derby Day, after her smart display at the last meeting, must receive some support but the lady has no liking to a wet course whereas her sister Double Fitness does not mind a heavy going. I cannot see how Diana Bay can fail to annex the Whit-sundate Plate, over

W. Park.

THE LANTAO HANDICAP

OVER 60,000 TICKETS SOLD

VERY OPEN RACE

Chief interest undoubtedly will be centred in the Lantao Handicap, not so much of the racing but on account of the special $1. Cash Sweep. I hear that over 60,000 tickets have been sold. However, the run of this important event is over five furlongs and anything may happen. For riding sprinting races, Mr. Proulx has no peers at the present moment and he will be up on Belmont Stakes. This pony has been allotted 145 lbs. but can he fit the scale? Mr. Davis has the choice of Hugomont or Sylvanide, and it will not surprise me should he weigh out on the latter who will be a source of danger to Belmont Stakes.

West Parade gave a very disappointing display last Saturday and she let the backers down very badly. She was made a racing hot favourite and there were 900 tickets to win out of a total of 2,201. She was never in the picture and it is to be hoped that she will make amends to-morrow.

If they make up their minds to run, there is nothing to touch. Double Chance and Festival Eye, Philander has a good burden on his shoulders and if he gets away ahead of the pack, the race is all over.

Old-Time Warriors To Race

EVENT FOR "E" CLASS PONIES

It is not often that we have an event for "E" class China ponies, but the racing committee decided to give these last hopes contests over six furlongs with the result the Smarties Handicap has attracted 14 entries. We have a fascinating problem to find the winner. It would be best to follow the handicapper's ranking list. He has assigned Limelight and Old Star to hold the post of honour 168 lbs. and the next down the list is Gold Pickler who has 155 lbs. to carry. Space does not permit complete biography of these three chargers but I sincerely hope that a short history will not be out of place.

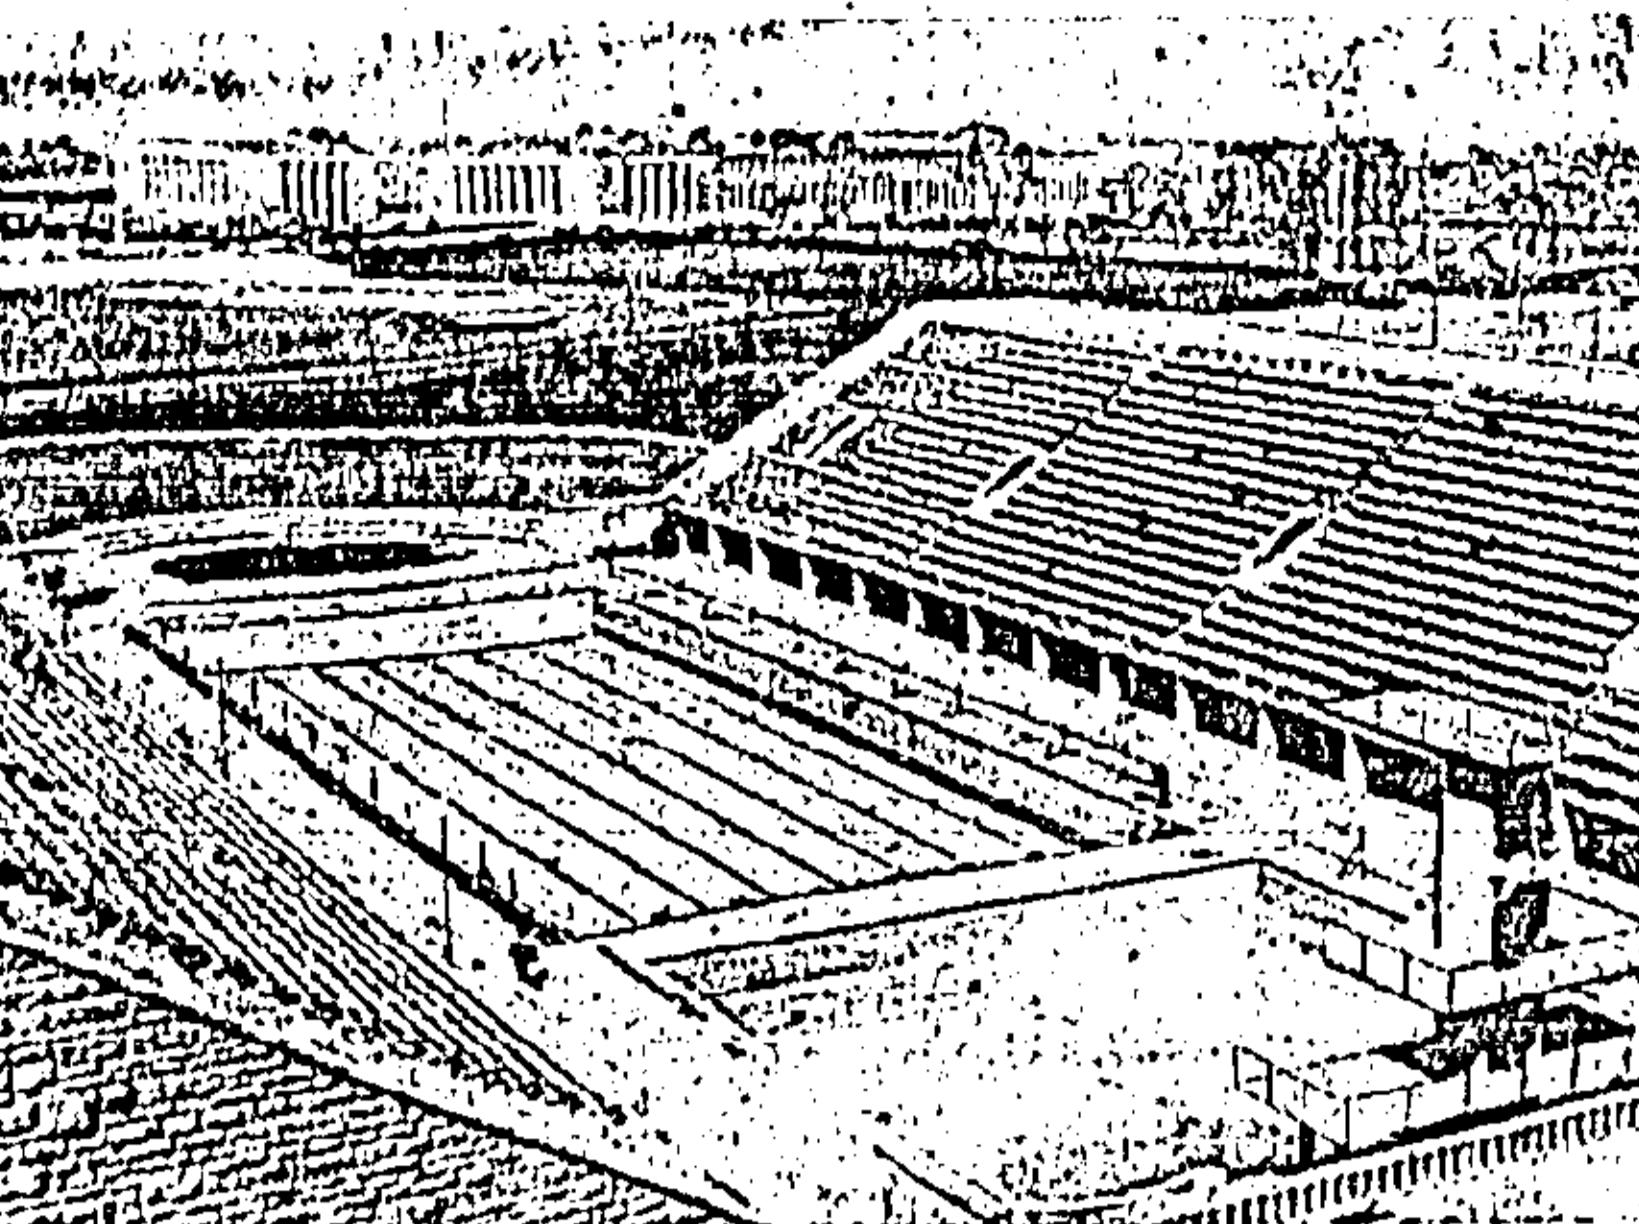

Limelight started his racing career in 1934 and he has to his credit two wins, a second and two thirds. It is worthy to mention that his two successes were in Macao and he has earned to date only $500. Old Star is branded E23. This bay mare arrived here in 1934 for Mr. Kwok Hing-wang (she owner of Seventeenth of September and The Hero) and she was named Good Enough. She dropped a foal and had a bad time. On account of this, Good Enough was returned to the Russian dealer in Shanghai and she came back in the following year to join the Dynasty's stable. As she could not give satisfaction to the connections, the mare had another trip to the North and returned this year to do the Kong Bros' silk. Old Star was not a bad name to be given the animal but the old lady, even with Mr. Li, could not present her card so the judges and the classification sub-committee stepped in to finish her racing career.

Gold Pickler was a 1935 Sub-griffin originally owned by Mr. Li Tse-fong and annexed the Governor's Cup for a win. The next day Gold Pickler lost the Northern Stakes by a short head, and after that, all his outings were among the "Also Rans."

FLYBYNIGHT TO WIN.

Another small field will be seen in the Green Island-Second Section for "C" class ponies over the champion course and Flybynight should pass the post first with Yilan and Victoria Hall to follow. Mr. Proulx will pilot Flybynight instead of Mr. Harris who has gone North. Valorous went lame after a gallop on Wednesday and has been scratched from the event.

EFFECTS OF WAVES

The magnificent swimming pool which is to be used for the World Olympics at Berlin next August

W. J. HOWCROFT DESCRIBES

20,000 SEATS—FILTERED WATER OF EVEN TEMPERATURE—OVERFLOW CUTTERS—ROPE LANES

Detailed particulars of the Olympic swimming Stadium at Berlin now indicate that the facilities there will exceed those provided at Los Angeles, and equal, at any rate, the amenities of the Olympic Pool at Paris, which I rate as almost ideal for competitors and onlookers alike.

The concrete stands at Berlin now in course of erection will accommodate nearly 20,000 spectators, and they have been built at an angle that will give every spectator a clear view of the racing course and the diving stages. The course for the straight swimming is 50 metres in length, with roped lanes to take eight competitors. Special arrangements have been made for overhead lines, hung with pennants, to be strung over the eight tracks for the backstroke competitions. Another innovation is that the diving tank is separate from the swimming pool. This will, of course, facilitate quick despatch, as at previous Olympiads there has been a noticeable waste of time in removing the roped lanes for the diving contests. The diving tank is 20 metres square with a depth of 4½ metres, and is equipped with the customary springboards and high platform start.

The swimming pool has a uniform depth of 2 metres, and inside the pool a water-polo field, 29 by 18 metres, will be available. On the west side of the pool there will be a running board 80 centimetres wide extending the whole length of the pool for the use of water polo referees. For the first time in the history of Olympic swimming, competitors will swim in filtered water, which will be a distinct improvement when one recalls the uninviting appearance of the water during the last few days at previous Games. A statement has been issued that the water will be so clear that it will be possible to read the headlines of a newspaper lying on the bottom of the bath.

It has not infrequently happened at international swimming contests, and particularly in the winter sports events in the Olympic Games of past years, that much unpleasant misunderstanding has been caused by differences of opinion regarding the proper temperature of the water. One team would find the water too cold, and another would find it too cold, according to the temperature to which they had been accustomed, and in which they had trained. The climatic conditions in Germany tend to keep the natural temperature of the water somewhat lower than that of the countries where swimming and other water sports are most generally popular. Swimmers who have trained in comparatively warm water are at a disadvantage when compelled to race in colder conditions, and those who have been used to cold water immediately feel the encroaching effects of a warm temperature. To secure some measure of uniformity, the International Swimming Federation has ruled that there must be a temperature of at least 68 1/2 degrees Fahr., and to comply with this requirement the German authorities are installing a heating apparatus that will maintain the temperature at this point, no matter what weather conditions may prevail.

EFFECTS OF WAVES

Another innovation will be an overflow gutter on the sides of the pool to catch the swell and reduce water disturbance. This should go far towards maintaining a smooth surface, and contributing to fast times. Few people apart from racing swimmers realise the retarding effect of waves rebounding from the sides of a bath not provided with overflow gutters.

It was claimed at Los Angeles that the weather conditions were so conducive to fast times that there would be little chance of new Olympic records being made in Europe. I do not, however, subscribe to this opinion. I believe that the filtered water and the overflow gutters at Berlin will more than offset the invigorating atmosphere of sunny California.

S. CHINA ON WAY TO CHAMPIONSHIP

BEAT THE C. R. C.

Great Finish For K.C.C.

LATEST LEAGUE TENNIS

Yesterday's "C" Division league tennis provided some unusually interesting features and a very worthy start to the season. By winning their first match of the programme, South China want the title, which was theirs last year. They beat Chinese Recreation Club by the imposing margin of six games to three and clearly demonstrated that they have the strongest combination in the division.

South China's first string played a brand of tennis right up to "B" Division standard and won all three sets without being extended, while H. K. Ho and C. L. Lau annexed two sets with just as much ease.

Chinese Recreation Club did not give the appearance of being so strong as in previous years, although C. Wei and P. F. Choy played well in two of their three sets.

South China were full value for their success and Recreio and K. C. C. (1) will have to be very good to beat them.

THRILLING FINISH

Kowloon Cricket Club first team participated in what can be described as the ideal tennis match. They entertained Kowloon Tong and won a fascinating match by the odd set. But this fact does not reveal the story of a thrilling struggle. The teams were level three-all at the end of the second round, with everything hinging on the last three sets. The Chan brothers, playing first string from Kowloon Tong, proceeded to beat Mackay and Smith 6-3, but Gittins and white retaliated by beating Fang and Wong 6-4.

Thus the result depended on the set between Watson and Capell of the K.C.C. and She and Yeo of Kowloon Tong. The visitors jumped off an early and lengthy lead, securing a 4-1, then a 5-2 advantage. It all seemed over, but the congratulations, when the K.C.C. pair started their recovery. They held service, then obtained a break-through and held on to a second time to draw level. In a long atmosphere they broke through again and finally clinched the set in the twelfth game, a magnificent finish.

It was hard luck on Kowloon Tong, who suffered their second successive defeat by the odd set. But the newcomers to the "C" Division have a useful team in the making and they will not lose many more matches. The Chan brothers were in excellent trim, but were not too well supported. K.C.C. boasted a better-balanced side and because of this deservedly won, although they will not have a closer shave to defeat this season.

RECREO AT THEIR BEST

Club de Recreio, considered to be among the chief contenders for the championship, were at their best against the Civil Service whom they walked 8-1, but one of the best achievements was that of K.C.C. (2) who went to Happy Valley and beat Craigengower by the odd set. D. Orr and A. Phillips won two sets for the visitors while N. J. Bebbington and A. L. Fisher retained a clean sheet by drawing two and winning one.

As expected Kowloon Indians have an interesting tie. They play K.C.C. on the Cox's Road courts, and the Indians may be given a very good run for their money.

The Hurlingham Club Polo Committee have invited Rao Raja Hanut Singh to play for England in the forthcoming Westchester Cup contest against America (holders) at Hurlingham.

Hanut Singh, who is one of the best players in the world, was the No. 3 of the Maharaja of Jaipur's team that won everything in London three years ago. He has been showing brilliant form during the past few weeks at the Beauport Club.

If he accepts the invitation, he will be the first Indian who has ever played for England in the Westchester Cup matches.

BRITISH RECORD FOR 100 YARDS EQUALLED

Cambridge, June 4.

In the contest between Cambridge University and the Amateur Athletic Association, A.G.K. Brown of Cambridge did the 100 yards in 9.7/10 seconds, equalling the British record set by E. H. Lindell in 1923.—Reuter.

Walker did not indulge in fireworks, but his consistent play marked him as a very capable competitor and one who, on such form, will be difficult to beat.

Luz ran into an early lead, but it was not due so much to his own brilliance as to the fact that Walker drew with accuracy.

YESTERDAY'S LEAGUE TENNIS DETAILS

COMPLETE SCORES OF "C" DIVISION GAMES

The following are the detailed scores in Shanghai's programme of "C" Division league tennis matches, the home teams appearing first.

Overwhelming the Civil Service C.C. by eight sets to one at King's Park, the Club de Recreio proved that they will also have to be reckoned with in the tournament. The Kowloon Indians had an easy victory over the Army T.C., while the Kowloon C.C. just managed to beat the Kowloon Tong Club.

On their own courts at Sookunpo, the Indian I.C. were defeated by the University by six sets to three, while the Craignepower C.C. lost to the Kowloon C.C. "B" by the odd set at Happy Valley.

SOUTH CHINA v. CHINESE R.C.

Playing on their own courts, the South China A.A. defeated the Chinese R.C. by 8-3. Scores:

L.T.A. ALIVE TO DANGERS

GRIEVANCES OF MINOR PLAYERS

SERIOUS DROP IN ENTRIES

Are the moderate and handicap players to come into their own at last? Their lot may be improved considerably if suggestions made by the Lawn Tennis Association are followed out, but the suggestions, particularly in the most important matter of seeded tournament draws, do not go far enough. At least a letter addressed to tournament secretaries shows that the L.T.A. are aware that all is not as it should be in the tournament world.

The letter, sent out by Mr. H. A. Sabelli, secretary of the Lawn Tennis Association, is divided into four sections, each dealing with the position of "medium and poor players" who constitute the bulk of handicap entries, but also help to swell the entry for open events, in fact, to use cliché, are the backbone of the game.

The fourth section is the most important, but also the weakest one. It touches on an artificial state of affairs brought in to tournaments by a regulation passed in 1929, the restrictive seeding of the draw in level events, to the number of four, and, while acknowledging that this "so far and no farther" ultimatum to the "medium and poor players" has had an undesirable effect, holds out no hope that the state of affairs may be remedied.

This seeding appeared desirable to certain interests in 1929, and had been, in some instances, practised sous rose. The same interests are now experiencing unexpected and unpleasant results in the form of falling entries.

ENTRIES DISCOURAGED

There is no doubt that the realisation by a player of certain, so far, limited attainments that he or she is prohibited from reaching the semi-final and "having a crack" at a top-notch, or something like one, has the effect of turning such a player away from competitive lawn tennis to friendly club play, with the consequent loss of players of promise.

Apart from the question of favourable circumstances for producing good players, there is that of enjoyment, which is, after all, the basis of all sport. There are many tournaments where no steps are taken to entice famous players, where seeding does not exist, and where half the county swell the entrance lists, tournaments such as these can afford to regard the L.T.A.'s letter with amused complacency.

TEXT OF THE LETTER

The letter is as follows:

"My Council have had under consideration the falling-off in entries for handicap events at tournaments during the last few years, and would be pleased to receive from you as follows:

(1) They are of opinion that probably the chief cause is the treatment meted out to handicapped players by referees. They are frequently kept waiting sometimes till late in the week, before being called upon to play, and then at any time of the day when it is convenient to the referee and the better players. This applies to the worst courts and odd balls, and, generally speaking, are treated with scant consideration.

A novelization of
20th CENTURY PICTURE

with WARNER BAXTER, GLORIA STUART and a
cast of 1000 players

President Lincoln was assassinated as he sat watching a play in the Ford Theatre at Washington. A few hours later in a small country town in Maryland, Dr. Mudd put splints on the fractured leg of a stranger who was determined to continue his journey despite his serious condition. By breakfast time, Federal soldiers, tracing a buggy which had been stolen that night, descended upon the Mudd household. A slender boot, the name, "John Wilkes Booth," printed on the lining, was found. The soldier waited in the home of Dr. Mudd, for him to appear.

my hands away from their work?" Dr. Mudd demanded quietly.

"You can't scare me, Mudd!" shouted the man, a pale, weedy fellow with long hair and baggy trousers. "You can't scare me!"

Keeping his seat, the doctor said sharply to the negroes who were slipping away, "Come back here, you men! and then to the carpet-bagger, "There isn't a man on my plantation who isn't here because he wants to be. Because they weren't freed yesterday, Master. They were freed four years ago! Anyhow who wants to leave can draw his pay and quit!"

"I know that trick!" the carpet-bagger muttered. "You get these darbies in debt to you—"

"Any oil you owe me money?" demanded Mudd.

"Now, suh, Mars' Sam," they chorused.

"Any reason you can't quit and leave if you want to?"

"Now, suh, us don't want to quit."

"Then get back to work! And you, sir, get off my place!"

"You can't fool me, Mudd! You're a slybother and always have been!"

Shouting and gesticulating, the carpet-bagger continued to harangue the negroes.

"Are you going to get off of my place," inquired Mudd quietly, "or be thrown off?"

They stared, rolling their eyes. "Aren't you happy about it?" he demanded. It always interested him to observe the reactions of these little humans, so like and yet so different from his own kind.

"Yes, suh, Mars' Sam," finally piped up the oldest girl. Then warmly, for the subject was closer to her heart, "Kin she go break fast now? Us is hungry."

"Your mammy won't be able to get breakfast for you this morning," the doctor replied. "Where's your puppy?"

"He gone to de speakin'?"

"Speaking!" exclaimed Dr. Mudd in disgust. "What's the matter with him, leaving Rosabelle at a time like this? What kind of speaking?"

"White folks speakin'," the older girl answered, squirming under his disapproval.

"Preacher?" inquired Mudd, buttoning his cuffs.

"Now, suh, ain't no preacher. Just a nacher man."

The doctor sighed and shook his head. Taking his coat from a nail by the door, he said sternly, "Then one of you big girls—you, Ella Mae—go there and sit with your mammy till she goes to sleep. The rest of you younguns better get out of the house and not make any noise."

Obediently Ella Mae sidled into the cabin, but the other children followed the doctor to his buggy and stood watching him drive away.

The doctor hadn't realized how tired he was. It had been foolish of him to sit up all night waiting for the summons to Rosabelle's cabin. But although his slaves had been freed long before the Civil War, he still felt responsible for them. They were so like children. He worried about their morals as well as their health. He must make that good-for-nothing Buck marry Rosabelle, he vowed.

Suddenly the doctor pulled his horse to a stop and stared off in the field at his right. Something was happening there. Under a great oak a man was standing, haranguing a crowd of coloured folks.

His mouth settling into a grim line, the physician reined his horse into the field.

As he came up, the white man was saying:

"You coloured brothers have got to realize you're no longer slaves! You're free men! And you're as good as any white man in the state of Maryland! The right to vote is yours—and it's up to you to take it."

As Dr. Mudd brought his horse to a stop, there was giggling and embarrassed glances among the negroes.

"Who gave you permission, carpet-bagger, to come on my land and take "Doctor Mudd?" inquired Lovett evenly.

"Yes."

"Do you acquainted with John Wilkes Booth?"

"I've seen him on the stage in Washington, yes."

"Would you recognize him if you saw him—on the street?"

Perplexed Mudd replied slowly,

"Why do you believe I would?"

"Was he here last night?"

"Of course not!"

"What did I tell you," the Colonel burst out, pulling angrily at his whiskers. "—Gad, I told you he wasn't here last night, didn't I?"

Ignoring the blustering Colonel, Lovett turned to Sergeant Rankin.

"Bring Mrs. Mudd down, Rankin."

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded Mudd for the second time.

His ordered these following the soldiers who, as though he had a feel right to invade the privacy of this home, was ascending the stairs to the bedrooms above.

"You can't even guess, I suppose," said Lovett, looking curiously at the doctor. He was a little sorry for this man, who seemed a decent, hard-working sort. But a soldier had to do his duty and Lieutenant Lovett had very clear orders as to what his duty was to-day. And, of course, there was the incriminating boot, with Booth's name on the lining. It had been found here, on the premises of this plantation. Such evidence could not be ignored.

"If you've harmed my wife," began the doctor. But just then Peggy Mudd came running into the room.

"Sam! Oh, Sam!" she cried. Putting his arms around her, the doctor faced Lovett.

"Well?" he inquired. "Perhaps now you'll tell me what it is all about?"

"Certainly," came the cool answer.

"Doctor Mudd is under arrest for conspiracy in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln..."

his voice hardened. "Who was murdered in Ford's Theatre last night by the man you welcomed into your home and aided to escape, John Wilkes Booth?"

Incredible! And yet it is true! Dr. Mudd must undergo a court martial. What will be the outcome?

CRICKETS INVADE SHIP IN MID SEA

Swarm Takes Refuge on Steamer Off Australian Coast—Decks Covered Inch Thick
Melbourne, June 1.

Driven from the ground by grass and bush fires in the western district of Victoria and carried out to sea by strong offshore winds, a large swarm of crickets found refuge on the coastal steamer Wannon.

The chief officer, J. Fraser, who was on watch at the time, said about ten o'clock at night, when the Wannon was about six miles off the coast, the swarm flew over the ship, and thousands fell on the decks.

"All through the night," he said, "we could hear the chirruping of the insects, and the crunching sound as they were crushed under our feet. They crawled into cabins and bunks, and even under our clothes. Sleep for the men below was impossible."

Fraser said the Wannon's decks were carpeted an inch thick with dead and feeble crickets. Boiling water had to be used to clear them off.

WHO LIVES ON MARS? IF ANY ONE!

ASTRONOMER LOOKS AT OUR PLANETS

SEASONS ON THE STARS

Some interesting details with regard to the possibility of life on the planet Mars were given by Mr. R. W. Wrigley, Assistant Astronomer at the Royal Observatory, Blackford Hill, when he addressed members of the Edinburgh Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon in the North British Station Hotel, Edinburgh, recently.

Mr. Wrigley, who took as his subject "Life in Other Worlds," said that many people would think that the solution of this problem could be solved by astronomers looking through their telescopes and by a long, patient scrutiny of the celestial worlds. It was not so easy as that.

There was only one body which was near enough for them to tell whether or not life existed, and that body was the moon, which was absolutely dead. In the case of the majority of the other planets there were handicaps, because many of them were covered with clouds, and in this investigation the telescope had to be supplemented by certain auxiliaries. There was the spectroscope, by means of which they could tell if there was an atmosphere on the planet; there was an instrument for telling the temperature; and there was mathematics. When they knew the temperature and the atmosphere, and by mathematics, the size and weight, they were able to tell quite a lot about the nature of a planet.

FACTS ABOUT MARS
In a reference to the sun, Mr. Wrigley said it was a most imposing body, more than a million times the size of the earth, but its temperature was tremendously high, and there was little or no possibility of life there.

Mr. Wrigley referred to Mercury, which, he said, was small, but very hot, and to Pluto, which was also small, but very cold. Jupiter had no oxygen and large quantities of ammonia and marsh gas, and Venus had thick covering of cloud, no oxygen, and a great deal of carbon dioxide. There remained Mars, which was in many ways the most interesting of all the planets. They could see much of the surface, and so much had been written about it and so much conjectured. They had all read the American professor's theory about the Martians being great engineers who had constructed their series of waterways, thereby maintaining their life.

The facts about Mars he would give his listeners and leave them to deduce the rest for themselves. Mars had a very clear atmosphere, and a day and night much the same as our own. Occasional clouds or dust storms could be seen. It seemed to be a remarkably flat country; there were no large sheets of water. Two prominent features were the two polar caps, one at each end, just the same as the earth. There were seasons like our own, only they lasted twice as long, one season lasting six months instead of three. The planet got much less heat from the sun because it was one and a half times as far away as the earth.

SEASONAL CHANGES

There were very interesting seasonal changes. In the winter the polar caps were very large, and as spring and summer drew on the polar caps began to melt, and round their edges appeared dark borders which

"IS IT LIKELY?"

"We can say," said Mr. Wrigley, "that it would be possible to live on Mars. It would not be very enjoyable, but in the course of many generations we might become acclimated."

They could not say there was any reason why there should be inhabitants on the planet. It almost looked as though Mars represented an old stage in evolution; Venus a preliminary stage, and they liked to think of the earth as being in its prime.

In conclusion he would ask them was it likely that among the billions of stars there was only one which had a planet bearing life?

Gardeners Plot

The sowing of lettuce or radish seed in the same drill with carrot seed is sometimes recommended, because the two former are of quick growth and soon show up the lines, so that the hoe may be put into early use.

* * *

Keeping silver tidy is a difficult matter when you have it jumbled together in a drawer. There is a good new silver tidy which fits into the bottom of the drawer.

It has narrow partitions for every kind of spoon and fork.

Another useful idea for the kitchen is an upright knife-holder. This has two rows of tiny partitions, one row for the small knives and one for large ones.

* * *

It is better to do without them, and curb one's impatience with the hoe until the carrots appear.

The later pulling-up of the quick-growing plants is bound to loosen the soil, and that is just what that pest, the carrot fly, will be waiting for.

Wedding
Reception

Here Comes

The BRIDE

TODAY'S Diary is in honour of future homemakers. I expect there are many mothers up and down the country who are planning their daughters' wedding.

Don't you agree that the prettiest and most enjoyable weddings are often the simplest? A cheery meal, a speech or two, finishing up with a party after the happy pair have left for the honeymoon, is a delightful celebration.

The problem of what food and refreshments to offer will probably take first place when you come to work out the plans. If the bride has fixed her wedding for noon or earlier, one of the jolliest celebrations is a sit-down lunch for the family and friends, the bride cake, of course, in the place of honour in the centre of the table ready to be cut at the end of the meal.

At an afternoon wedding a reception with light refreshments usually follows, and I think that most mothers will find this the easiest way of entertaining.

It is surprising how elastic even a small house becomes on these occasions if you go about things in the right way. I saw one good notion at a friend's wedding the other week.

The presents were displayed in an upstairs room which had been cleared for the occasion, and I noticed that the bride's mother took two or three people to see them at a time, all of which saved a good deal of congestion. Some of the larger furniture taken out of the lounge will be useful for people to walk about and for the bride and groom to greet their guests. I would keep the dining-room purely for refreshments.

The dining table can be set into the window bay or against the wall, to be used for serving tea and coffee, while sandwiches and cakes, with piles of plates, are put ready on smaller tables ranged round the walls.

Cutting the Cake

The bride cake, of course, is meant to be admired as well as eaten, so you might put it on a table in the lounge. One wedge ready cut and the place marked with a ribbon makes things easier for the bride.

If you decide on a sit-down lunch or tea, there will be table decorations to be thought of. To my mind there is nothing better than bowls or vases of spring and summer flowers. Pale pink roses or carnations, for example, look beautiful mixed with a few spikes of delphiniums or lupins.

Cakes, too, are obtainable with tinted icing instead of white. There is a lovely creamy off-white tone, shell pink, and the palest almond green for folk who are not superstitious. I fell for a pink cake, with pink blue and silver for the table decorations. Guests will appreciate the compliment of a flower posy in each woman's place, and a buttonhole for the morning guests.

Bride and bridegroom, of course, sit together at the head of the table, the bride at her husband's left hand. The bride's mother sits at his right, with the bridegroom's father next to her. To the left of the bride come her own father and next to him her mother-in-law.

I Propose a Toast

There is no special precedence for the remainder of the guests, but it is a good plan to arrange beforehand where they shall sit, and put a small place-card at each cover.

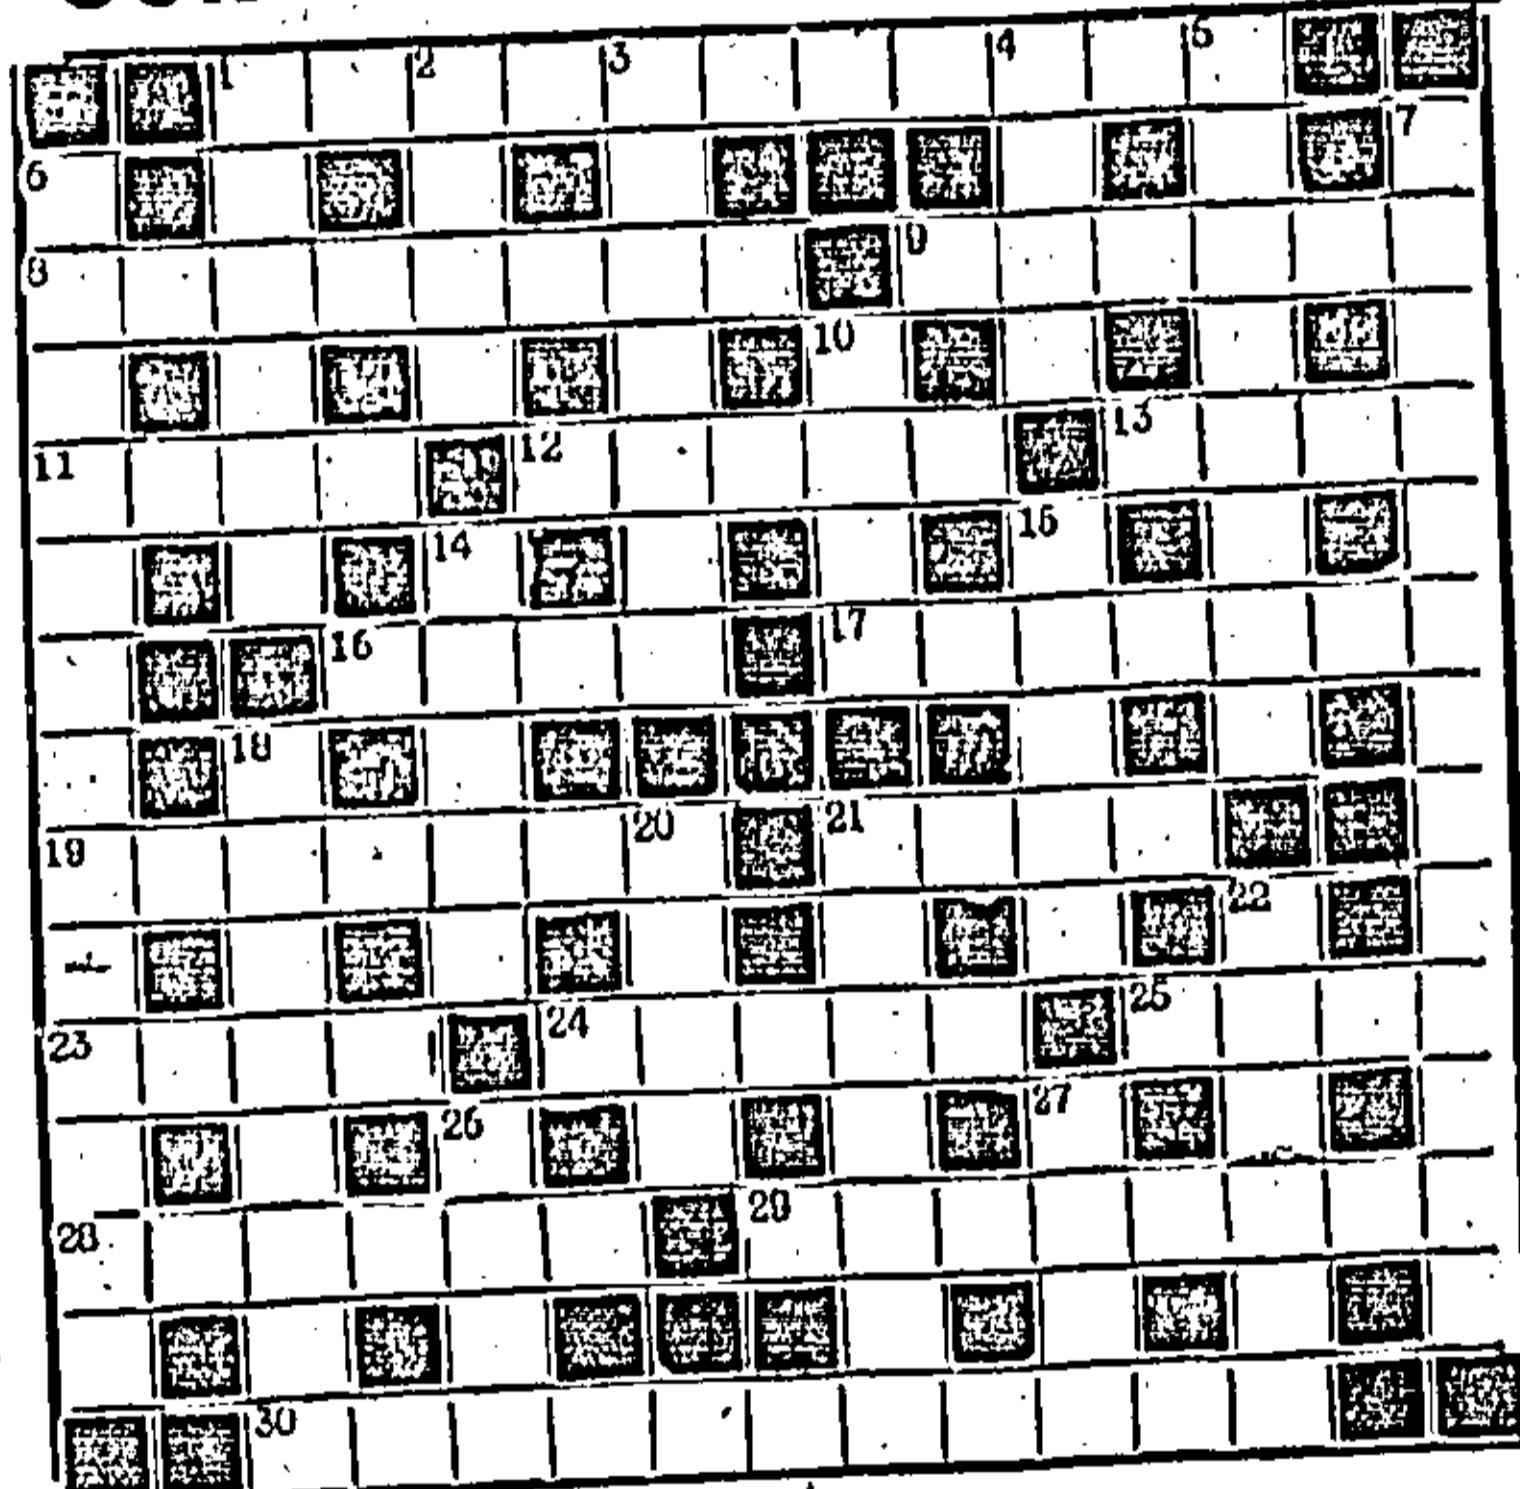

Then the speeches. If you are having a reception, these will come about half-way through; if a sit-down lunch or tea, towards the end of the meal. The first toast is naturally the health of the bride and bridegroom, proposed by the bride's father. The bridegroom replies to this.

The bride's health is then proposed by some old friend or relative of the family, and the best man replies for them. After these main speeches one or two old friends will probably like to add their congratulations.

At some weddings the bridesmaids and best man go off to a party of their own, but the wedding reception often expands into a party for everyone.

This should not mean much extra work for the bride's mother. Supper can be provided from the food left over from the reception with some extra sandwiches, and you can arrange dancing and games for the younger set in the lounge.

RHUBARB PIE

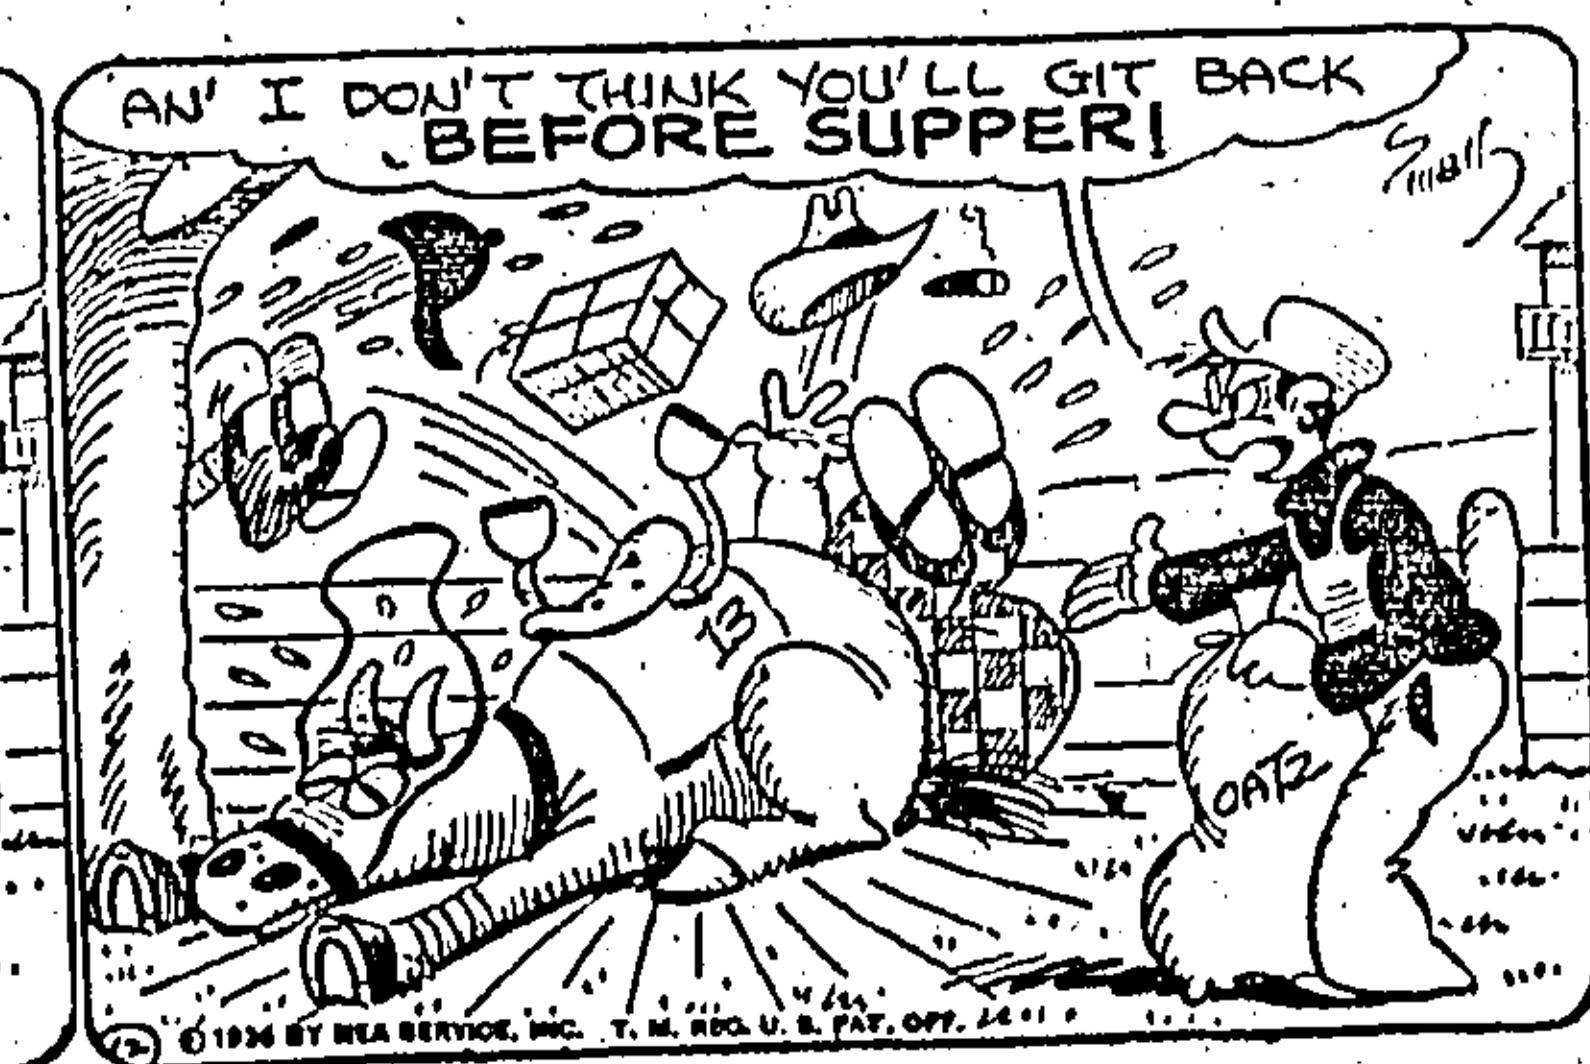

MAKE a white onion soup and for a slight change in flavour season it fairly liberally with paprika pepper.

Do not egg-and-bread crumb the veal cutlets, but coat them simply in plain butter, and remember, above all, that veal is like the dog, the woman and the walnut-tree—"the harder they're beaten the better they be!" So beat each cutlet until it is at least half as thick as it originally was. Have ready some tomato sauce and when the cutlets are done, keep them hot while you mix with the acid the juices which have escaped from the meat into the frying-pan. Pour the finished sauce over the cutlets which you have arranged in a wall of nicely mashed potato.

Don't forget a squeeze of lemon in the rhubarb pie.

Mystery Murder of "Girl in Pyjamas" No Nearer Solution

Sydney, N.S.W., June 1.
All hope has been abandoned in Australia of discovering the identity of the "Pyjama Girl," or who murdered her. Her body, clad in yellow Chinese silk pyjamas, battered, burned and charred, was found in a culvert under a road near the border town of Albury, in September, 1934.

Since that time an intensive hunt has been going on to discover her identity, spreading far overseas; but without success.

Scotland Yard was asked to help, the police in Paris, Berlin, New York and all the large cities in the world were asked to help, but the question, "Who is she?" remained unanswered.

Paris did come along with the identification that she was an Austrian girl who had married a Czechoslovakian, but this was found to be incorrect.

The case is remarkable from a statistical point of view. Ten thousand pounds were spent in trying to unravel the mystery; detectives travelled thousands of miles, checking up clues; 30,000 people were interviewed on the matter; more than 100,000 letters were received by the police on the subject, some of them as far away as Norway; 200 girls and young women, posted as missing, were discovered, and a large number of missing wives found, some happy and some unhappy, while thousands of circulars and photographs were printed and circulated.

PECULIAR EARS

The girl had peculiarly-shaped ears and these formed the main feature in some of the photographs "close-ups." Experts examined the girl's mouth and expressed the opinion that dental work that had been performed on the teeth had been done by an English dentist.

One detective has done nothing since the discovery of the body, seventeen months ago, but attend to the case, while 1,000 people have viewed the body in the hope of being able to identify it.

One police theory was that the girl had only recently arrived in Australia by ship, that she had had a love affair with a man on the voyage and that her lover had taken her by motor car far into the country, murdered her and left the country. Ship's officers and pursers were provided with photographs, but still no clue was provided.

The girl's body still lies in a bath of formalin in the Sydney University Medical School. Occasionally the room is opened to admit someone who might be able to identify the girl.

SECOND OF DEATH JURY DIES

New York, June 1.
PHILIP HOCKENBURY, one of the jurors who in February of last year found Bruno Richard Hauptmann guilty of murdering the Lindbergh baby, was killed today.

His body was found on a railway track near Highbridge Station, New Jersey.

He had been repairing a train signal and was apparently struck by a passing train.

Hockenbury is the second Hauptmann juror to die. The other, Liscum Case, collapsed with a heart attack last February.

£2,680 STAMPS STOLEN ON TRAIN JOURNEY

PROPERTY OF "ARISTOCRATIC ENGLISH FAMILY"

Vienna, June 1.
Vienna police announced today that a member of "an aristocratic English family" has been robbed of a stamp collection worth £2,680 on a train journey between Vienna and Paris.

Mr. Patrick Woods, a British subject, who is secretary to the owner of the collection, told the police that a young woman, understood to be an actress, exchanged the box containing the stamp collection for a similar box which was empty.

The woman left the train at Basle. Who she appears to have been carefully planned, for the false box was similar to the stolen one in every detail. Exchange.

Princess Of France Wants To Be British

PRINCESS FRANCOISE MARGUERITE DE BOURBON-ORLEANS, one of the nearest living descendants of the Kings of France, and niece of the Pretender, has just applied to the British Medical Journal: papers.

The Princess revealed recently why she wished to become British.

"My father, Prince Henri de Bourbon-Orleans, died when I was very young," she said, "and I was given to England in 1903. It was decided that I should pass my life here. Although I have not always lived here since then, I feel very English. So I decided the best thing to do would be to get naturalised."

"I am the first member of my family ever to change nationality, but I think it is quite right."

I was born in 1897. On the day I was born my father, who was an explorer, had travelled all over the world, lost for Abyssinia. He went out to map the region around Harar.

"While he was out there, he fought for the Abyssinians against the Italians in the campaign of the summer of 1897."

"He fought a duel with an Italian during the campaign, and the Italian's sword pierced his side."

"King Louis-Philippe, the last of the Bourbon Kings, was my great-great-grandfather. There he is."

She showed the interviewer an oil colour-print.

"I am in the direct line of descent. My uncle, the Duke de Guise, is the head of the family to-day."

"I am also related to King Charles X. of France."

"Of course, do not think because I am getting naturalised that I do not like France."

"I love my France very much. I have not been there for years. I can only go for a visit, as the law at present forbids me to live there. Now that I am to be English, I think I shall be able to go back."

Oxford Union Goes "Red"

BUT NOBODY SEEKS TO CARE

The Oxford Union last month carried a resolution by a majority of 10 "that this House recognises no flag but the Red Flag."

Despite predictions to the contrary, there was no trouble, and the only incident was provided by a solitary member who, soon after the debate had started, walked out of the hall with a Union Jack draped over his shoulder.

Mr. Lyall Wilks, Balliol College, who supported the motion, declared that Hitler had learnt his treatment of the Jews from the British treatment of the Indians and Africans both at home and abroad.

Even at Oxford, said Mr. Wilks, the coloured peoples of the Empire were not treated as decent and honourable people, and the Carlton Club would not allow its members to bring coloured members of the Empire into the club as guests.

"I oppose the Union Jack," Mr. Wilks added, "primarily because it is the symbol of patriotism, and mankind must save itself from the evils of selfish patriotism if mankind is to save itself from destruction."

EMPIRE AN EXPERIMENT

An opponent of the motion, Mr. Patrick Anderson, Worcester College, said that the red flag did not stand for anything good or worth while.

The British Empire was an experiment, and they should not break the test tube before the experiment was completed. There was only one force which stood for internationalism to-day, and that was the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Three years ago the Union, by a majority of 122, passed the motion: "That this House will in no circumstances fight for its King and country."

The resolution brought vigorous protests. A parcel addressed to the President of the Union was found to contain 275 white feathers—the number of those who supported the motion.

FOR ITS 100TH. BIRTHDAY CITY TO BE SMOOTHERED IN FLOWERS

As part of South Australia's centenary celebrations, Adelaide has decided on elaborate arrangements to transform itself, during the latter part of September, this year, into an enormous bower of millions of blooms.

Besides floral displays on floats, lorries, cars and cycles in various processions, the main streets and even the tram-poles and statues are to be garlanded. Shops, houses and verandas are to be smothered in blooms, flowers are to be planted in strips along the footpaths, and battles of flowers are to be held, according to recent decisions, says Austral News.

Fancy-dress carnivals with dancing in the streets are to be held, flower girls will parade everywhere, and no male citizen, it is forecast, will dare to appear without a buttonhole.

Youthful Film Star Receives Allowance From Canada

FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW, SAID TO EARN $1,500 A WEEK BY ACTING, DRAWS MONEY AS SON OF DISABLED WAR VETERAN

Ottawa, June 1. Freddie Bartholomew, twelve-year-old British film star who won overnight fame as the orphan in the screen play based on Charles Dickens' David Copperfield, has received an annual allowance from the Canadian Government, it was learned to-day from a reliable source.

Cecil Llewellyn Bartholomew, the boy's father, it was learned, enlisted at Toronto in 1916 in the Royal Canadian Dragoons, went to England and was drafted to the 10th Battalion, C.E.F. He was wounded in one knee so severely that surgeons were forced to amputate his leg.

A crisis is developing among the folk who use the language that is never spoken and never written. For hundreds of years this soundless speech has been handed down from parent to child. But now the children are learning too fast, and their elders cannot understand them.

ENTITLED TO ALLOWANCE

As the son of a war veteran receiving a disability allowance, Freddie and his sisters, Eileen and Hilda, were entitled to allowances from the Canadian Department of Pensions. The scale of allowances is $180 for the first child, $320 for two children and $420 more for each additional child.

Freddie's pay is reputed to be $1,500 a week, but it could not be learned if he was likely to lose his allowances due to his large earnings. Ordinarily he would be entitled to it until he is sixteen.

AUSTRALIA BUYS, SELLS AND SAVES MORE

Two sets of figures, just issued in Canberra, reflect the continuing recovery of Australia in particular and the Empire in general, from depression.

They show that for the first eight months of the current financial year, Australia has a favourable trade balance of $20 million sterling. Imports, compared with the previous corresponding eight months, are up 30%, up, at $6,000,000. They have been increased by the purchase of more motor cars, petrol, tobacco, machinery and arms and ammunition, largely from Britain. Larger sales of wool, wheat, wine, skins and frozen lamb helped exports to be increased by $14 million, according to Australian News.

The second set of figures shows an increase of $24 million in deposits in Australian savings banks, to $221,985,000, or between $11 and $12 per head of the total population.

LABOUR INDICATES OPPOSITION

London, June 4. The Amalgamated Engineering Union, at its annual conference, is discussing the Government's re-armament policy, and is determinedly opposed to the dilution of labour by the introduction of trainees.

The Conference has adopted a motion affirming that there is no shortage of skilled labour, if the available supply is efficiently handled. Moreover, the Conference is instructing the Executive to use the whole resources of the Union definitely to oppose dilution from whatever angle, either Government or employers, its introduction is sought.—Reuter Special.

FILIPINO SELLS HIRED FURNITURE

LARCENY CHARGE AT KOWLOON

A Filipino, Raymond Filler, aged 29, unemployed, of No. 22 Ngai Tsui Loong Road, appeared before Mr. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning on charges of larceny of furniture and failing to report his change of address, in contravention of the Registration of Persons Ordinance.

Defendant was charged with stealing a sideboard, a dining table, four chairs, a sofa, a dressing table, a bed and two easy chairs, the property of Wu Leung, master of the Cheung King furniture shop, No. 318 Nathan Road. He was also charged with failing to report his change of address on May 24, being an alien.

Before proceeding with the case Detective-Inspector A. H. Elston asked leave to add a bed and two easy chairs to the property stolen.

Defendant pleaded that he had hired the furniture. He had paid his rent regularly until two months ago, when his father had not sent his remittance from Manila. He was then tempted to sell the furniture, but he now expressed his deep regret at having done so. Regarding the second charge, he was so worried over what he had done, that he forgot to notify the police of his change of address.

Defendant added that his wife had died eight months ago, and he was now pleading for a chance on behalf of his motherless five-year-old son. He asked that he be given time to pay the people back for the furniture, as he was expecting to hear from his father, to whom he had written directly after he had committed his offence. He also alleged that he had drawn up an agreement with the person to whom he had sold the property, to hold it back until he could re-purchase the furniture. Defendant had been earning a living teaching dancing privately.

SALE OF FURNITURE

Inspector Elston said that defendant hired the furniture from complainant on November 15 last year. The furniture was worth $220. Defendant immediately set about selling it and had furniture men in to value the property, but he wanted too much. Five dollars a month had been paid the furniture men. On May 9 this year, defendant's landlord approached him and asked for his rent, but defendant sold him a Chesterfield suite instead for $5. On May 16, he sold the rest of the property to a second furniture dealer for $30 plus commission and transport. A receipt was given which was not stamped. Defendant then disappeared from his address.

From the proceeds of the sale of the furniture, defendant paid another instalment on the furniture. He had paid a total of $58, and had signed an agreement to pay $14 a month for the hire of the furniture. Defendant was arrested yesterday on a warrant.

Wong Fuk, the man to whom defendant had sold the furniture, admitted in Court that he had agreed with defendant to give him back the furniture if he had the money to repurchase it within fifteen days.

Inspector Elston added that he had to go to three different shops under Wong Fuk's control to recover the furniture. When the man was first questioned, he had denied all knowledge of it.

His Worship decided to adjourn the case for one week to see if any money was forthcoming from defendant's father.

Defendant, from the dock, stated that in truth he did not steal the money. He was formerly employed as a pantry boy at the Y. M. C. A.

His Worship commented that the defendant might have imagined he had a right to the money.

Defendant was remanded until tomorrow for enquiries.

CORRESPONDENCE

Some Language Querries

(To The Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.)

Sir—It is indeed unfortunate that the two million readers of the Daily Express should be led further toward illiteracy by "Professor" C. V. R. Thompson, and one supposes that he would be asking too much that he should do the cap and gown and take a glance at the Now Oxford English Dictionary.

He might be surprised to learn the definitions of the English words—biscuit, crayon (including bombhummus and candy. He will also find spoon spoon, and perhaps he will explain its use. Is it for eating bananas or apples? He would find only one pronunciation for secretary and it isn't "secret'y". At the same time he might learn the correct pronunciation of a number of words ending in -ary and -ory.

Mutton is not unknown in America; it finds its way into Irish stew in the cheaper "joints". But as a joint, not even the addition of mint sauce and currant jelly can fool the American nostril.

American an unknown language? It is spoken by over a hundred million people. But can someone tell me where English is spoken or where one may find an English critic of American speech who is literate?

CHARGED WITH ROBBING FATHER

"SCALLYWAG" IN THE DOCK

A particularly mean type of thief was described before Mr. Dalfour at the Central Magistracy this morning when Chan-Piu, 26, unemployed, was charged with the theft of four Hongkong dollars and a dollar in ten-cent pieces from his father, Chan Kau, aged 70, who is a hunchback.

Defective Sergeant Guild explained that the old man was a cigarette hawk and gave his son a daily allowance of 40 cents. On Tuesday the defendant asked for more money and his father refused whereupon he took the money from his father's pocket. The latter made a report to the police and the defendant was arrested yesterday. The defendant was remanded yesterday, added Sergeant Guild, seemed to be a scallywag frequenting brothels and dives.

Defendant, from the dock, stated that in truth he did not steal the money. He was formerly employed as a pantry boy at the Y. M. C. A. His Worship commented that the defendant might have imagined he had a right to the money.

MOTOR-CARS LEFT UNATTENDED

TWO PROSECUTIONS IN KOWLOON

Summoned for leaving his motor car unattended at Salisbury Road, near the Star Theatre, on May 17, M. H. Currie, Manager of the Hongkong branch of Imperial Airways, was represented by Miss B. Pestoni who pleaded guilty at the Kowloon Court this morning. Traffic Sergeant McLarney prosecuted.

The Magistrate, Mr. E. Himsworth, remarked that in a letter from defendant, he pleaded extenuating circumstances in that he had instructed a car company to remove the vehicle, and they had not done so. However, His Worship held that defendant was still responsible, and imposed a fine of $10.

A fine of $5 was imposed on Mr. F. Rosario, when he appeared before Mr. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, in answer to a summons of leaving private car No. 4382 unattended in Peeling Road near Hankow Road at 10.30 p.m. on May 15.

Defendant pleaded that he had seen other people park their cars there on previous occasions, and had also done so, not knowing it was an offence. On the night in question, defendant was attending a performance at the Star Theatre. Acting Sub-Inspector Brittain prosecuted.

WEEK'S TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS

TWO FATALITIES REPORTED

In the Colony of Hongkong, including the Island, Kowloon and the New Territories, during the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, May 30, there were altogether 33 traffic accidents, as the result of which two persons were killed and 15 persons were injured.

Of the persons killed, a Chinese female died as the result of injuries received when she was knocked down by a private motor car whilst walking across the road. A Chinese male died as the result of injuries received through falling off a moving motor lorry.

Of the persons injured, 11 were pedestrians who were either walking or running across the road and were struck by vehicles. One private car driver and two passengers were injured as the result of collisions between vehicles. One bus passenger was injured while alighting from a moving motor bus.

Of the 33 accidents, 16 were collisions between vehicles; 13 were collisions between vehicles and pedestrians; and five accidents were due to other causes.

LOITERER SENT TO GAOL

ADMITTED PLANNING TO STEAL

Chau Wah, alias Chan Yiu, 18 years, unemployed, appeared before Mr. Dalfour at the Central Magistracy this morning and pleaded guilty to charges of loitering at Des Voeux Road Central and possession of an iron hook, an instrument fit for an unlawful purpose.

Det-Sergeant T. Cashman, prosecuting, stated that at 3 p.m. on June 3 P.C. 430 saw that defendant and another man loitering round the entrance of the Asia Cafe. The other man bolted. Defendant, when charged, stated that he intended to steal vegetables from the steamer Kwong Tung and to use the iron hook to break open the baskets.

Two months hard labour was imposed.

SOUTH BANK OF THAMES

BIG IMPROVEMENT PROJECT

London, June 4. Long a subject of reproach by lovers of London and of ambitious schemes by town planners, the south bank of the Thames, from Westminster Bridge and County Hall down to Blackfriars Bridge, is to be considered at a joint conference of the City Corporation, the London County Council and the Southwark Borough Council to be held shortly.

A scheme for the improvement of the area, projecting into the very heart of London, and of immediate action to arrest further deterioration of the waterfront, will be put forward.—British Wireless.

A TRADITIONAL ROLE

Italian commentators have been suggesting ulterior motives in the succour which Britain is affording to the ill-starred Emperor of Ethiopia, who has now arrived in England. Rome interprets the visit as a successful move by the sanitarian element in the British Cabinet and in other political spheres which support these penalties, to retard the development of better Anglo-Italian relations. What is apparently overlooked is that it is a British tradition of many years' standing to give protection to distressed royal personages. The task is disinterested and humanitarian. Moreover the visit is being made at the Emperor's own request. In this case, it would have been highly culpable to have allowed the Negus to fall into the hands of his enemies. The Italians may make him the butt of their derision; to the British people he is a fit subject for sympathy.
During the war, he did not spare himself, and it is only fair to assume that he would never have left his country had the local chiefs remained loyal and his troops been capable of effective resistance to the invaders.
As events turned out, the defenders were unable to save their native land from the might of the Italians, which, after all, is not surprising. There was fear, after the Emperor left, that disaster might overtake the foreign colony in the Ethiopian capital before the Italians arrived to restore order, but thanks to the part played by the British Legation staff and guard in the rescue of the foreign communities, a justifiable source of pride to all concerned, the worst was prevented. The forethought whereby a force of Sikhs was sent to Addis Ababa was abundantly justified by subsequent events.
Indeed, had it not been for this small but efficient unit, grave consequences might have resulted to the thousands of foreigners who must have been profoundly grateful for the protection accorded. This work of rescue, like the accord of succour to the Negus, is also a British tradition. We count it a privilege to perform such services, knowing also that other nations would do likewise in similar circumstances. Thanks to the worldwide nature of British responsibilities, our opportunities for such humanitarian intervention are and have been more abundant than those of other countries. But they are willingly accepted and discharged, and the case of the visit of the Negus to England is merely an other illustration of the fact.

And it was at this very moment that above the triste whine of the gale there imposed itself the deeper ominous note of an explosion.
The ship lurched, a dreadful grating noise somewhere in the bowels of the vessel—like flats flung into the delicate mechanism of machinery,

TWENTY YEARS AFTER—

USED as they were to a succession of shocks and horrors, few events in the war staggered the nation as did the death of Lord Kitchener, at the time Secretary of State for War.

* * * * *

On June 5, 1916, while on his way to Russia in H.M.S. Hampshire, an armoured cruiser, the ship struck a mine off the Orkney Islands, between the Brough of Birsay and Marwick Head.

She sank in a few minutes. Nearly 800 officers and men and Lord Kitchener and his staff were drowned. There were only twelve survivors.

How Kitchener Died*The Ship Rolls Over

We were now away from the Hampshire. Boats, still crammed with men, hung from her derricks.

And then, with a fearful kind of slow lurch, the ship rolled over.

I closed my eyes. It was unbearable.

An unaccountable fascination made me open them.

There was not much left of the Hampshire.

And into the vortex of her last somersaulting plunge were drawn boats, men and wreckage.

The Hampshire had disappeared two miles from shore. When a wave raised us we could see the wink of a light or two on the rocky Orkney mainland.

Should we ever reach there?

Men on our raft were dying with appalling swiftness.

The water was icy cold. The strain and exposure were proving too much for them.

Old Tom Jennings—a grey and grizzled gunner—started a song. It was "Tipperary." He roared it with a fierce if pathetic display of bravado.

Some of us, half-heartedly, joined in the chorus.

It stood up in the midst of this raging ocean and deliberately sang it again. . . . farewell Leicestersquare."

Tom Jennings slipped to the bottom of the raft, and the water closed over him.

Gradually we were being swept towards the Orkney coast.

An hour passed. Another. It was twilight.

Forty-three men had died on the raft. There were only four of us left.

We had passed a score of floating bodies.

Some had still a spark of life in them.

They were clinging to lifebelts and pieces of wreckage. There was the look of final despair on their upturned faces.

With a jolting grind the iron grating of the raft caught on a submerged rock.

The coast was only a few yards away. And yet we were much better off?

Very little, it appeared, for above our straining eyes there arose, almost sheerly, tier upon tier of jagged rocks.

Could we, now in this exhausted state, negotiate those treacherous heights?

It looked utterly impossible.

Now we had been drawn away from the coast by the recession of a giant wave, now an incoming roller flung us towards it again.

Hope replenished our failing strength, and with a daring born of a final fight against despair I clutched a jagged point of rock.

The sea drew the raft away. I was alone.

Wave after wave hurled itself at me.

I never thought I should be able to hold out against their terrible battering.

As they broke and the water receded
I scrambled a little way further up the precipice.

I was now numb with the cold.
My limbs felt like lead. My hands were bleeding.

The salt water in the incised fissures was as red-hot needles searing it.

At last the rocks were less steep.
I was near the top. Five more yards.

The surface of the ground above me I was frantically clawing was flat.

I had reached it. I sank to the ground exhausted.

I might have remained there half an hour, an hour, two.

I didn't think of time. I was saved.

There was a light ahead. I rose.

But my knees immediately gave.
Again I staggered up and fell.

I gave up, and lying flat face downwards I wriggled my way across a field towards the light. A crofter's dwelling. I beat on the door with the heel of my boot.

The door was open. I fell across the threshold in a state of collapse.

She lifted me further.

Clouds of steam were emerging from her foremost engine room on the starboard side.

And then Lord Kitchener turned back.

The captain had called to him to come up to the forebridge. He had mounted the ladder. I saw the captain's head above the smoke.

The conflicting sounds of rushing water and screaming wind were suddenly pierced by the sharp note of the upper bugle.

It swelled and faded as the squall tormented its shrill cadences.

I went down to my messroom for a drink.

"What about Leicester-square to night?" sighed Tom Lench, who like myself, hailed from London.

He munched his bread and cheese meditatively, a far-away look in his eyes.

Then Samuel Sweeny started a conversation on the possible prosence of U-boats on our course.

He was shouted down. Then mines.
But some one had heard that the coast had been swept.

As we drew away several of the injured leaped on the raft into our midst.

I shall never forget their agonized screams as the salt water washed their wounds.

An Admiralty inquiry was held.

Survivors were summoned to it.

We were fifty yards away. A hundred. Waist-deep in a churning surf. Tossed hither and thither on the waves. Whirled with maelstrom fierceness.

A good many were almost immersed, awfully swept from the raft by enemy's fleet at Jutland. U76 laid thirty-six mines.

Kitchener Comes On Deck

And it was at this very moment
that above the triste whine of the gale there imposed itself the deeper ominous note of an explosion.

The ship lurched, a dreadful grating
noise somewhere in the bowels of
the vessel—like flats flung into the delicate mechanism of machinery,

The fierce hiss of escaping steam.
The slice of rushing water. The confused trample of feet above.
Shouting. Urgent shouting.
There was a rather alarming alarm about the floor of the messroom.
There had been many that night.
But this one didn't seem to be
bulent.

Captain Herbert J. Savill, the captain of the Hampshire, stood at the gangway to greet Lord Kitchener as he came aboard followed by considerable party.

There were his personal military secretary, Lieut.-Colonel O. A.
Fitzgerald, Mr. H. J. O'Brien, of the Foreign Office, Sir H. F. Donaldson and Mr. L. S. Robertson, of the Ministry of Munitions, Detective MacLaughlin, of Scotland-
yard, and several others.

But this one didn't seem to be

Then the lights flickered out.
It took a long time to get there.
The only open hatchway was aft.
The messroom was forward. There was a lot of water in the corridors.
Gushing water.

There was a great deal of excitable congestion at the companion-ways. I came up on to the half-deck. They were saying that the Hampshire had struck a mine. It had exploded on the port side of her foremost engine-room. A boiler had been burst.

But the Hampshire was well down by the head. Heeling a little to starboard, too. Men were hurrying to their bat stations. Some were already there. The bats were all starboard stations to starboard.

IMPORTS GAINED 58 PER CENT IN LAST TWELVE MONTHS

(By "Telegraph" Staff Representative)

There has been a movement afoot in Canada and the United States for many years, led by men of economic vision, the main aim of which is to encourage trade between Canada and China on one hand and China on the other.

Japan came into the picture, too, but not to the same extent as China; for it was felt that the potentialities of the Chinese market were vast enough to dwarf the commerce it might be possible to develop with Japan, highly industrialised and fairly self-contained in the matter of foodstuffs for some time to come, with Formosa, Korea and Manchukuo helping to supply the demand of Japanese consumers.

But China was different. There was a market there, providing the country had the purchasing power, which would make possible the multiplying of trans-Pacific commerce by thousands. The possibilities were incalculable.

Canada, although the business men of the country may have been slow to recognise it, needs just such a market as China in order to feed her infant industries. For a long time progress in trade between Canada and China has been slow, however, and money was hesitant when it was asked to enter a Far East enterprise. It was expensive; and there was risk.

But now Canada is taking the gamble; cautiously at first. But the business men are awakening to their opportunities, gradually. They realise that in order to sell to China they have to buy from China, and last year—in 1935-36—they bought just 58 per cent more from Chinese farmers and manufacturers than in the year previous.

It was the most remarkable increase, this 58 per cent jump, that Canada's imports have known in many years. The total of its imports from China was approximately $11,151,000 (Hongkong currency), compared to only $6,900,000 the year previous.

The month of March showed the most outstanding gain. China's exports to Canada during those 31 days moved upwards by 84 per cent, in comparison to the same month of the previous year.

Canada buys a great variety of goods from China, but more than half the total is peanuts and peanut oil. Other China exports include eggs,

A motor accident occurred shortly after 10.30 this morning when a Chinese boy was slightly injured and received treatment at the hospital.

Count Kuan-kai was driving motor lorry No. 534 along Connaught Road Central when near Pottinger Street, a boy, Li Sia, who was carrying a box on his shoulder, suddenly stepped off the pavement and was struck by the rear left corner of the lorry. He received slight injuries to his left foot.

Count Thakach-Tolvay told a Daily Mail reporter:

"I am looking forward to meeting Lord Rothmore, to whom I have the very pleasant duty of handing the badges of the Hungarian Legion and to express to him on behalf of Hungarian ex-Servicemen our warm gratitude for his splendid work for justice to Hungary."

One man died and six were injured during the time. An influenza epidemic sent five members of the unit to the hospital. Camera and sound equipment worth $30,000 was lost. A motor boat capsized, drowning Rossen and a camera crew into Clearwater River. Lumberjacks rescued them.

BRITAIN'S OLD SEA DOGS ARE PASSING

WARTIME SEAMEN LEAVING SERVICE

TAKING THEIR PENSIONS

This year will see the passing out of the Fleet of the greater part of the generation of men who were at sea with the Fleet on the outbreak of war in 1914. Very soon it will be a rarity to see a petty officer or rating wearing the ribbon of the 1914 star.

Sailors normally join the Navy for a period of twelve years, at the end of which period they may, if they desire, re-engage for a further period of eight years to complete their time for pension.

Thus, the men who were serving at the outbreak of war, and who were then over 18 years of age, will be pensioned off within the next few months.

There will, however, be some 3,000 exceptions to this rule. These are the men who have recently re-engaged for a further period of three years in response to the request of the Admiralty. This request was made a few months ago when it became obvious that the normal manning situation would not allow of adequate precautions being taken in the international emergency.

The length of time which has elapsed since the Great War is further emphasised by the fact that this year, for the first time, there are officers wearing the "brass hat" of a commander and not a single war medal ribbon.

Hungarian Army Chief In London

How friendship between former enemy countries has been stimulated by King Edward when, as Prince of Wales, he visited the ex-Servicemen's organisations of other countries in Europe, was exemplified by the arrival in London of Field-Marshal Count Thakach-Tolvay, President of the Hungarian Legion.

Count Thakach-Tolvay has come to England at the invitation of the British Legion. He was received in Budapest by the Prince of Wales last September, and handed him the badges of orders of the Hungarian Legion.

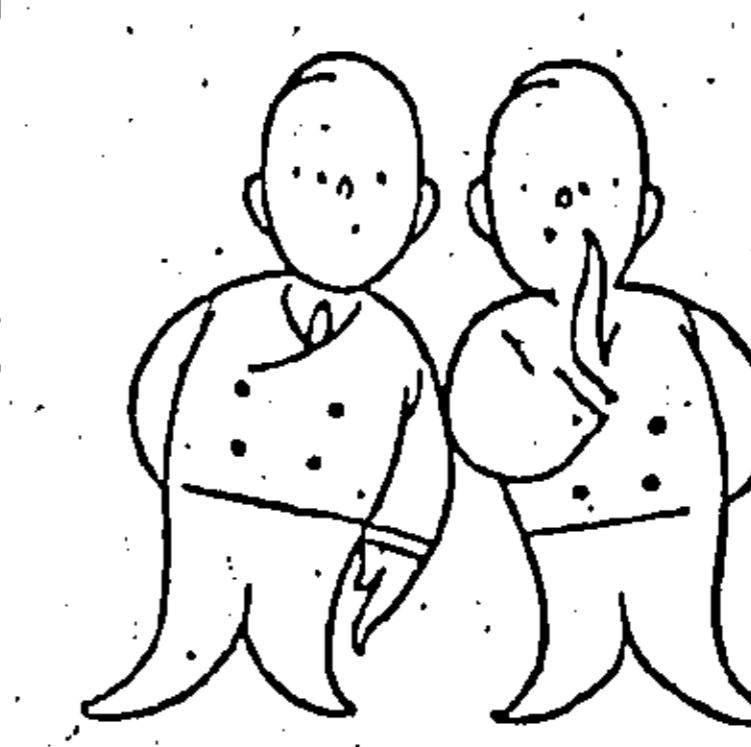

Count Thakach-Tolvay told a Daily Mail reporter:

"I am looking forward to meeting Lord Rothmore, to whom I have the very pleasant duty of handing the badges of the Hungarian Legion and to express to him on behalf of Hungarian ex-Servicemen our warm gratitude for his splendid work for justice to Hungary."

ROYAL SCOT FINISHED UNTIL AFTER RECESS

Cannot Run To-Morrow Owing To Big Stake Winnings

CHIEF INTEREST IS IN LANTAO HANDICAP

COMPREHENSIVE REVIEW OF PROGRAMME

(By "Captain Foster")

It was indeed a great pity that the Stewards of the Hongkong Jockey Club had no other alternative but to postpone the second day of the Whitsun Plate Meeting, owing to the sodden state of the track, for an hour later the weather cleared up. As a result, the Macao meeting, which was to be staged on Sunday, will be held a week later. It may interest punters to know that very good entries have been received for this meet.

To-morrow the first saddling bell will be rung at the usual time, 1.30 p.m., and the first race will be run at 2.00 p.m. We are now in the rainy season, but, if Mr. Clerk of the weather should favour us with glorious sunshine, punters may look forward to a repetition of last Saturday's excellent racing with a series of close finishes and several good dividends.

By virtue of winning over $2,500 in stake money since the beginning of the year, Royal Scot has been barred from the main event, the Whitsun Plate, and he will not be racing again until after the recess. Although the great mare of the stable Harbrad had to bow to Soldier of Britain in the May Handicap run last Saturday, it was certainly no disgrace to her for she succumbed by the narrowness of margin. It is worth remembering she was conceding 10 lbs. to the winner. Whether I was the jockey which brought about a change in the saddle, I really do not know, but Mr. Dietz rode a hard race on Royal Scot and it must be admitted that on level terms the combination will be hard to beat. The May Handicap was run in very fast time of 1.57.4/5, and Oak Bay was no match with the first three placed ponies.

SMALL FIELD OF GRIFFINS FOR THE OPENING EVENT

There will be a small field of this season's griffins running in the opening event, the Beaufort Handicap over a mile, and this event is more or less a consolation race to China Ponies that have not won more than $2,000 since January 1. We should see a good contest between Amberley, Boot Bay and Dawn Star, and all of them have been handicapped on their best form.

In the Sugar Loaf Handicap, Dawn Star carrying 155 lbs. beat Amberley with 161 lbs. by a short head and the former is now set to concede five pounds. When Dawn Star turned the tables on Boot Bay in the Mount Davis Handicap, she had a pull of 11 lbs., and for a beating of a length Boot Bay has the same weight (161 lbs.) to shoulder while Dawn Star has to tip the scale with 154 lbs.—a difference of seven pounds. I believe the adjustment is in favour of Dawn Star who will be piloted by Mr. Ip Kai-ying.

ZERO HAS VERY GOOD CHANCE OF BREAKING BAD SEQUENCE

Zero has run into a sequence of six unplaced outings but the brown mare was always running in the better divisions and she makes her first appearance to-morrow among the "D" class ponies in the Lantao Handicap over five furlongs. It will be recalled that she did a modest gallop on Wednesday, May 27, covering six furlongs in 3.47.5 and this should bring her to the fore. Zero has been well looked after in the matter of poundage with 161 lbs. and her chief rival is Foxbridge but be careful with Daylight Eve on a soft going. Tyne is dangerous to upset the apple-cart.

BONDI HANDICAP Lancashire Lad Looks Best

In the Bondi Handicap for "A" class Australian Ponies over a mile, I understand Mr. Proulx will take out Shooting Star instead of Bobbinak Star who was third in the Warwick Farm Handicap run last week, and the pony has a good chance if the going is not fast. As a matter of fact, I prefer Lancashire Lad, as this youngster has proved to be a mud-racer and he is not very high in the handicap. Derby Day, after her smart display at the last meeting, must receive some support but the lady has no liking to a wet course whereas her sister Double Finesse does not mind a heavy going. I cannot see how Diana Bay can fail to annex the Whitsun Plate, over

VERY OPEN RACE

Chief interest undoubtedly will be centred in the Lantao Handicap, not so much of the racing but on account of the special $1 Cash Sweep. I hear that over 60,000 tickets have been sold. However, the run of this important event is over five furlongs and anything may happen. For riding, sprinting races, Mr. Proulx has no peers at the present moment and he will be up on Belmont Star. This pony has been allotted 142 lbs. but can he tip the scale? Mr. Davis has the choice of Burgomaster or Sylvandale, and it will not surprise me should he weigh out on the latter who will be a source of danger to Belmont Star.

West Parade gave a very disappointing display last Saturday and she let the backers down very badly. She was made a racing hot favourite and there were 6000 tickets to win out of a total of 2201. She was never in the picture and it is to be hoped that she will make amends to-morrow.

If they make up their minds to run, there is nothing to touch Double Chance and Festival Eve. Philander has a good burden on his shoulders and if he gets away ahead of the pack, the race is all over.

EVENT FOR "E" CLASS PONIES

It is not often that we have an event for "E" class China ponies, but the racing committee decided to give these last horses a contest over six furlongs with the result the Smugglers Handicap has attracted 14 entries. We have a fascinating problem to find the winner and it would be best to follow the handicapper's ranking list. He has assigned Lime-light and Old Star to hold the post of honour 168 lbs. and the next down the list is Gold Piker who has 155 lbs. to carry. Space does not permit complete biography of these three chargers but I sincerely hope that a short history will not be out of place.

Lime-light started his racing career in 1934 and he has to his credit two wins, a second and two thirds. It is worthy to mention that his two successes were in Macao and he has earned to date only $950. Old Star is branded E23. This bay mare arrived here in 1934 for Mr. Kwok Hing-wang (the owner of Seventeenth of September and The Hero) and she was named Good Enough. She dropped a foal and had a bad time. On account of this Good Enough was returned to the Russian dealer in Shanghai and she came back in the following year to join the Dynasty's stable. As she could not give satisfaction to the connections, the mare had another trip to the North and returned this year to the Kong Bros' silk. Old Star was not a bad name to be given the animal but the old lady, even with the Tientsin crack-jockey Mr. D. S. Li, could not present her card so the judges and the classification sub-committee stepped in to finish her racing career.

FIRST LEG OF "D. D."

Rose Evelyn Will Be The Winner

The first leg of the "Daily Double" is on the Pineapple Handicap for sub-griffins of this season over one mile from the list of entries before me.

Mr. Alves must have had an easy time in framing the handicap. Rose Evelyn, "Miss Champion" of the Annual Carnival, holds the post of honour with 108 lbs. and the next is Wild Cat with 157 lbs. to shoulder, while Gold Sovereign has to tip the scale at 161 lbs.

It is interesting to note that all others, seven in number, have been asked to carry the lowest impost of 140 lbs. and several jockeys are having Turkish Bath in order to be at the right weight. Rose Evelyn must win with Wild Cat and Gold Sovereign to follow in the rear.

20,000 SEATS—FILTERED WATER OF EVEN TEMPERATURE—OVERFLOW CUTTERS—ROPE LANES

Detailed particulars of the Olympic swimming Stadium at Berlin indicate that the facilities there will exceed those provided at Los Angeles, and equal, at any rate, the amenities of the Olympic Pool at Paris, which I rate an almost ideal for competitors and onlookers alike.

The concrete stands at Berlin in in excess of 20,000 spectators, and they have been built at an angle that will give every spectator a clear view of the racing course and the diving stages. The course for the straight swimming is 50 metres in length, with roped lanes to take eight competitors.

Special arrangements have been made for overhead lines hung with pen-mans, to be strung over the eight tracks for the backstroke competitions.

Another innovation is that the diving tank is separate from the swimming pool. This will, of course, facilitate quick despatch, as at previous Olympiads there has been a notable waste of time in removing the roped lanes for the diving contests.

The diving tank is 20 metres square with a depth of 4½ metres, and is equipped with the customary springboards and high platform stage.

The swimming pool has a uniform depth of 2 metres, and inside the pool

a water-polo field, 28 by 18 metres, will be available. On the west side of the pool there will be a running board 100 centimetres wide extending the whole length of the pool for the use of water-polo referees. For the first time in the history of Olympic swimming, competitors will swim in filtered water, which will be a distinct improvement when one recalls the uninviting appearance of the water

during the last few days at previous Games. A statement has been issued that the water will be so clear that it will be possible to read the headlines of a newspaper lying on the bottom of the water.

It has not infrequently happened at international swimming contests, and particularly at the water sports events in the Olympic Games of past years, that much unpleasant misunderstanding has been caused by differences of opinion regarding the proper temperature of the water.

One team would find the water too cold, and another would find it too warm, according to the temperature to which they had been accustomed, and in which they had trained. The climatic conditions in Germany tend to keep the natural temperature of the water somewhat lower than that of the countries where swimming and other water sports are most generally popular. Swimmers who have trained in comparatively warm water are at a disadvantage when compelled to race in colder conditions and those who have been used to cold water immediately feel the invigorating effects of a warmer temperature. To secure some measure of uniformity,

International Swimming Federation have ruled that there must be a temperature of at least 69½ degrees

Fahr., and to comply with this requirement the German authorities are installing a heating apparatus that will maintain the temperature at this point, no matter what weather conditions may prevail.

EFFECTS OF WAVES

Another innovation will be an overhead gutter on the sides of the pool to catch the swell and reduce water disturbance. This should go far towards maintaining a smooth surface, and contributing to fast times. Few people apart from racing swimmers realise the remarkable effect of waves rebounding from the sides of a bath not provided with overflow gutters.

It was claimed at Los Angeles that the weather conditions were so conducive to fast times that there would be little chance of new Olympic records being made in Europe. I do not, however, subscribe to this opinion. I believe that the filtered water and the overflow gutters at Berlin will more than offset the involving atmosphere of sunny Call-

BEAT THE C.R.C.

Great Finish For K.C.C.

LATEST LEAGUE TENNIS

Yesterday's "C" Division league tennis provided some unusually interesting features and a very worthy effort to the season. By winning their first match of the programme, South China went a long way towards winning back the championship last secured in 1934. They beat Chinese Recreation Club by the imposing margin of six games to three and clearly demonstrated that they have the strongest combination in the division.

Chinese Recreation Club did not give the appearance of being so strong as in previous years, although C. Wei and P. F. Choy played well in two of their three sets.

South China were full value for their success and Recreio and K.C.C. (1) will have to be very good to beat them.

THRILLING FINISH

Kowloon Cricket Club first team participated in what can be described as the ideal tennis match. They entertained Kowloon Tong and won a fascinating match by the odd set. But this fact does not reveal the story of the thrilling struggle. The teams were level three-all at the end of the second round, with everything hanging on the last three sets. The Chan brothers, playing first string from Kowloon Tong, proceeded to beat Mackay and Smith 6-3, but Gittins and Wong 6-4.

Thus the result depended on the set between Watson and Cappell of K.C.C. and She and Yeo of Kowloon Tong. The visitors jumped into an early and lengthy lead, securing a

HOW CHINESE OLYMPIC FOOTBALLERS FADED DOWN IN JAVA

FINE RECORD AT PRESENT IS:

(By "Varitas")

With a record of five wins and a draw in six matches played up to May 21, the Chinese World Olympic football team can be said to have made a highly successful start to their campaign in search of international honours. According to a letter received this morning from Mr. Wong Ka-tsuen, manager of the squad, the Chinese played two games at Saigon, one at Singapore, one at Batavia, one at Bandoeng and one at Sourabaya against the Native Bond, which is the representative team of that place.

The results of those matches were:—won 8-1, won 4-1, won 4-0, won 2-1, drew 2-2 and won 10-2. Thus five out of six matches have been won with a goal average of 30 for and seven against, a fair tribute to a well-balanced team.

Describing the three games played at Java, Mr. Wong Ka-tsuen says that in the first, against Batavia Bond, the match was played on the same day that the team landed in Java. They had a very rough crossing from Singapore and half of the team were suffering from sea-sickness.

The line-up for the game was:—Wong Ki-leung; Li Tin-sang and Tam Kong-pak; Leung Wing-chui, Chu Ah-fai and "Darkle" Chan; Yeung Shui-yick, Suen Kam-shun, Fung King-cheung, Lee Wal-tong and Ip Pak-wa.

The game started at 4.47 and exactly half an hour later Fung King-cheung opened the scoring. Three minutes later Tam Kong-pak handled in the penalty area and half-time, Lee Wal-tong scored from the spot kick.

At half time "Darkle" Chan and Suen Kam-shun were displaced by Lee Kwok-wai and Cheuk Shek-kam respectively. Three minutes after the interval Lee Wal-tong put the Olympians ahead, and although the Chinese pressed continuously for the remainder of the game they could not increase the score.

AGAINST BANDOENG BOND

The Olympic players received their first check of the tour against the Bandoeng Bond, the local team earning a draw of two goals each.

Once again Tam Kong-pak was responsible for conceding a free kick from which a goal resulted. This time, in an attempt to head away

Tam Kong-pak, who seems to be finding it impossible to avoid handling the ball gave away another penalty in this half, while Lee Wal-tong actually failed to net from the spot kick when the Chinese were awarded a penalty.

cut down to 7-6, Walker was clearly in the ascendant, while Lutz became more and more erratic.

J. Fraser had to pull out his very best lawn bowls to beat W. Gill on the J.R.C. green. At one stage Fraser, with his opponent's score at 18, was seven shots down, but thereafter he bowled with marked skill, recording a two, a single, another two, and then a three, eventually winning 21-19.

Lying three on the 21st head which would have put him on level terms with his opponent, G. Strange suffered the mortifying spectacle of J. D. Thompson not only taking out his winner but lying shot to win the match. This game, played at Tinkoo, was one of the most enthralling of yesterday's programme. The players were always within sight of each other, the scores being 15-all on the 17th head. Thompson scored a three, but Strange replied with a two. Then Thompson went ahead again to lead 20-17. Followed Strange's unhappy experience and the match was all over.

E. C. Fincher was rather surprisingly eliminated by W. Mulcahy on the Recreio green losing 22-0. Fincher was in arrears from the first head and could not compete against the sustained accuracy of Mulcahy.

The results in brief were:

H. A. Alves (Recreio) beat R. Duncan (Kowloon Dock) 22-19
W. Mulcahy (K.C.C.) beat E. C. Fincher (K.C.C.) 22-9
W. L. Walker (K.I.G.C.) beat R. F. Lutz (Recreio) 22-11

J. Fraser beat W. Gill (Crain-gower) 21-19
W. K. Way (Crain-gower) beat A. M. Rumjahn (I.R.C.) 22-7
J. D. Thomson beat C. Strange (C.S.C.C.) 21-17

L.T.A. ALIVE TO DANGERS

SERIOUS DROP IN ENTRIES

Are the moderate and handicapped players to come into their own at last? Their lot may be improved considerably if suggestions made by the Lawn Tennis Association are followed out, but the suggestions, particularly in the most important matter of seeded tournament draws, do not go far enough. At least a letter addressed to tournament secretaries shows that the L.T.A. are aware that all is not as it should be in the tournament world.

The letter, sent out by Mr. H. A. Sabelli, secretary of the Lawn Tennis Association, is divided into four sections, each dealing with the position of "medium and poor players" who constitute the bulk of handicapped entries, but also help to swell the entry for open events, in fact, to use a cliché, are the backbone of the game.

The fourth section is the most important, but also the weakest one. It touches on an artificial state of affairs brought in to tournaments by a regulation passed in 1929, the restrictive seeding of the draw in level events to the number of four, and, while acknowledging that this "so far and no farther" ultimatum to the "medium and poor players" has had an undesirable effect, holds out no hope that the state of affairs may be remedied.

This seeding appeared desirable to certain interests in 1929, and had been, in some instances, practised sub rosa. The same interests are now experiencing unexpected and unpleasant results in the form of falling entries.

ENTRIES DISCOURAGED

There is no doubt that the realisation by a player of certain, so far, limited attainments that he or she is prohibited from reaching the semi-final and "having a crack" at a topnotcher, or something like one, has the effect of turning such a player away from competitive lawn tennis to friendly club play, with the consequent loss of players of promise.

Apart from the question of favourable circumstances for producing good players, there is that of enjoyment, which is, after all, the basis of all sport. There are many tournaments where no steps are taken to entice famous players, where seeding does not exist, and where half the county swell the entrants lists. Tournaments such as these can afford to regard the L.T.A.'s letter with amusement.

TEXT OF THE LETTER

The letter is as follows:

"My Council have had under consideration the falling-off in entries for handicap events at tournaments during the last few years, and I have been requested to write to you as follows:

(1) They are of opinion that probably the chief cause is the treatment meted out to handicapped players, particularly those who are frequently kept waiting, sometimes till late in the week, before being called upon to play, and then at any time of the day which may be convenient to the referee and the other players. They are given the same criteria and old bells, and, generally speaking, are treated with scant consideration.

(2) Your attention is drawn to No. 1 (1) of Regulation 27, which states that in handicap tournaments under which handicap competitions should be divided into two classes where the number of entries exceed 32,

(3) This falling-off in entries may to a certain extent be due to the fact that no competitor is allowed to receive a handicap in Regulation 23. This regulation was made in 1929, whereas it is only in recent years that the falling-off has taken place. You will be interested to know that, as a result of representations made by the Council, the Council are putting forward a proposal at the annual general meeting on December 11 next, to alter Regulation 27 to make it permissible for a player to be allotted a handicap for a race, provided that he receives more than 30 from any other competitor.

(4) My Council are of the opinion that this falling-off is also due to the restrictive seeding of the draw in level events, introduced in 1929 (Regulation 23), and which means that the four leading players at a tournament are practically certain to reach the semi-final and the final.

Therefore, they are giving the handicapped players many of them used to do in the past.

(5) The consequences are that medium and poor players never get a chance of playing in level events at handicap tournaments which would be such good practice for them and so attractive to them."

Brilliant Century

HITS 110 OUT OF 134 TOTAL

Shanghai, May 28.

Enterprising work by Booth alone relieved the monotony of the innings by his team against H. G. Reed's XI in the S.C.C. friendly match yesterday, the first innings skipper carrying his bat for 110, the first century of the season. Seventeen boundaries and a lovely six to the on the were included in his total. Reed's side had an easy win, P. V. Simpson and the skipper combining in a fine fast wicket stand.

Had it not been for the grand knock made by their skipper, Booth's eleven would have suffered a most dismal defeat, the sum total of the remainder reaching no more than 24 runs.

The match nearly opened with a hat-trick by Heap, the latter getting Marsay with the second ball of his second over before the score had been opened and then dismissing Adams without addition. Ellis blocked the fourth ball of the over carefully, but fell victim to the fifth, and three wickets were gone without score.

Even up to the eighth wicket, the position was gloomy, for with John's dismissal by Burford, the sebro was only 46. Spraggott put up a stout resistance, however, and slashed out at everything and held up his end at everything and held up his end until Booth added 41 runs to the score before Pullen had the ninth man for obstruction.

E. M. P. Williams held his end up long enough for his skipper to add another 48 runs through the partnership, and both stands were fine examples of unselfishness.

GOOD BOWLING

Pullen and Heap were bowling brilliantly, especially Pullen, who found the wicket unusually responsive to his stuff, while Heap's three wickets cost only 14 runs, the latter being taken off early in the game.

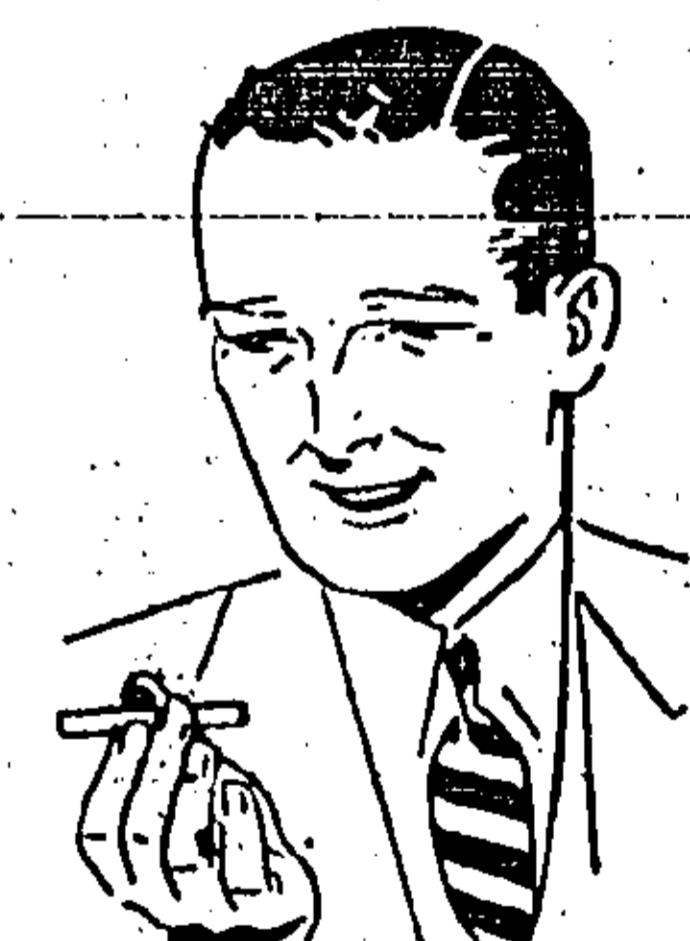

The critical moment and one that encouraged Warwick with renewed hope occurred with the total at 176 for eight. Paine, who was then 22, was settling down with Wilmett to courageous resistance, placed a ball from Allen into the usual safe hands of Hulme at third slip—and he dropped the chance!

After this Paine did not once falter, and he remained to await the appearance of his crippled colleague and to finish off matters in a blaze of glory.

THE PRISONER OF SHAGGY LAND

A novelization of
DARRYL F. ZANUCK'S
20th CENTURY PICTUREwith WARNER BAXTER, GLORIA STUART and a
cast of 1000 players

President Lincoln was assassinated as he sat watching a play in the Ford Theatre at Washington. ... A few hours later in a small country town in Maryland, Dr. Mudd put splints on the fractured leg of a stranger who was determined to continue his journey despite his serious condition. By breakfast time, local soldiers, tracing a "buggy" which had been stolen that night, descended upon the Mudd household. A steamed boot, the name, "John Wilkes Booth" printed on the lining, was found.
The soldier waited in the home of Dr. Mudd, for him to appear.

CHAPTER THREE

President Lincoln had just assisted another small life into the world.
Standing wearily by the cabin door, rolling down his shirt sleeves, the doctor could not help smiling as he contemplated the eleven brothers and sisters of the newborn—surely the blackest family he had ever seen.

"Well, you've got a new little brother," the doctor told them joyfully.

They stared, rolling their eyes.
"Aren't you happy about it?" he demanded. It always interested him to observe the reactions of these little humans, so like and yet so different from his own kind.

"Yes, sir, Marse Sam," finally piped up the oldest girl. Then warmly, for the subject was closer to her heart, "Kin she get breakfast now? Us is hungry."

"Your mammy won't be able to get breakfast for you this morning," the doctor replied. "Where's your pappy?"

"He gone to de speakin'!"

"Speaking!" exclaimed Dr. Mudd in disgust. "What's the matter with him, leaving Rosabelle at a time like this? What kind of speaking?"

"White folks speakin'," the older girl answered, squirming under his disapproval.

"Preacher?" inquired Mudd, buttoning his cuffs.

"Naw, suh, ain't no preacher. Jest a nacher man."

The doctor sighed and shook his head. Taking his coat from a nail by the door, he said slowly, "Then one of you big girls—Ella Mae—go in there and sit with your mammy till she goes to sleep. The rest of you young uns better get out of the house and not make any noise."

Obediently Ella Mae sidled into the cabin, but the other children followed the doctor to his buggy and stood watching him drive away.

The doctor hadn't realized how tired he was. It had been foolish of him to sit up all night waiting for the summons to Rosabelle's cabin.

Despite his fatigue, his slaves had been freed long before the Civil War. He still felt responsible for them. They were so like children. He worried about their morals as well as their health. He must make that good-for-nothing Buck marry Rosabelle, he vowed.

Suddenly the doctor pulled his horse to a stop and stared off in the field at his right. Something was happening there. Under a great oak a man was standing haranguing a crowd of coloured folks.

His mouth setting into a grim line, the physician reined his horse into the field.

As he came up, the white man was saying:

"Good mornin' nothing!" burst out the outraged Colonel. "Don't speak to the filthy Yankee hounds!"

"I—Gad, come bustin' into a man's home, while he's eatin' his vittles."

"Gad, asking lot of dad-blamed fool questions about actors!"

"Show up, Grandpa!" said Rankin contemptuously.

Amazed and indignant, the doctor put his little daughter down.

"What's the meaning of this?"

my hands away from their work?"

Dr. Mudd demanded quietly.
"You can't scare me, Mudd!" shouted the man, a pale, scedy fellow with long hair and baggy trousers.

"You can't scare me!"

"Are you acquainted with John Wilkes Booth?"

"I've seen him on the stage in Washington, yes."

"Would you recognize him if you saw him—on the street?"

Perplexed, Mudd replied slowly,

"Why yes, I believe I would."

"Was he here last night?"

"Of course not!"

"What did I tell you?" the Colonel burst out, pulling angrily at his whiskers. "I—Gad, I told you he wasn't here last night, didn't I?"

Ignoring the blustering Colonel, Lovett turned to Sergeant Rankin.

"Bring Mrs. Mudd down," he ordered.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded Mudd for the second time.

His outraged gaze following the soldier who, as though he had a perfect right to invade the privacy of this home, was ascending the stairs to the bedroom above.

"You can't fool me," Lovett said.

"Sam! Oh, Sam!" she cried. Putting his arms around her, the doctor faced Lovett.

"Well?" he inquired. "Perhaps now you'll tell me what it is all about?"

"Certainly," came the cool answer.

"Doctor Mudd is under arrest for conspiracy in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln..." his voice hardened. "Who was murdered in Ford's Theatre last night by the man you welcomed into your home and aided to escape, John Wilkes Booth!"

Incredible! And yet it is true. Dr.
Mudd must undergo a court martial. What will be the outcome?
Don't miss this to-morrow.

"Doctor Mudd?" inquired Lovett eagerly.

"Yes."
